ASTOR YACHT WAS SAFE AT SAN JUAN ON NOVEMBER 17

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The steamship Harry Luckenbach, in to-day from San Juan, reports that Colonel John Jacob Astor's yacht Nourmahal was in the San Juan Harbor on November 17, having run in there on Sunday, November 14, from Magaguey. She was much the worse from her experience with the hurricane.

All was well on board, it was reported. It was the intention of Colonel Astor to sail soon after the seventeenth for Ponce, and later proceed to some Cuban port.

The Nourmahal's stay at San Juan was for the purpose of waiting for some American that was going down on the S.S. Carolina to join Colonel Astor at that port. The Nourmahal was then to proceed to some Cuban port previous to her trip north.

SEEK NEWS OF ASTOR FROM SAN JUAN STEAMER

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The United Wireless Company to-day directed its operator at Cape Hatteras to pick up the steamer S. V. Luckenbach, which was due to leave San Juan to-day. This vessel, which was reported missing when the hurricane was at its height, has been at San Juan several days, and her captain, it is believed, would know if the Nourmahal were at San Juan, or had been there.

The commandant of the Norfolk, Va., navy yard station to-day said over the long distance telephone that there was positively nothing in the Washington yard's report that a wireless message had been received there to the effect that the Nourmahal was safe.

"We have sent out no messages in search of information of the Astor yacht and have received none," said the commandant.

HATTIE LE BLANC DECOY FOR SLAYER?

Police Theory Growing That Girl Did Not Herself Shoot Glover, but Enticed Him to Laundry.

Hattie Le Blanc lured Clarence F. Glover to his laundry in Waltham on Saturday evening where he was shot and killed, according to Glover's dying statement. This fact was learned this afternoon from Dr. Fred L. Macdonald, one of the first physicians to reach the wounded man's side as he lay in the home of Dr. Cousens.

"Did you arrange the meeting between yourself and Hattie Le Blanc?" Dr. Macdonald asked Glover.

"No, she arranged it—she sought the meeting," replied Glover.

The police are in a quandary, in the light of this development, as to whether the girl decoyed the man to the laundry to kill him or for the purpose of assisting another to do the work. The detectives who have been working on the case are by no means certain that the pretty seventeen-year-old maid did the shooting, in spite of Glover's emphatic statement that she did.

The hunt for the missing girl was renewed with added energy this afternoon by one squad of officers, while another went to the Glover home to see if they could get any new points from the widow of the slain man.

Dragging in River.

The wood near Waltham is being searched and the Charles River dragged again. Should the girl's body be found, that would probably be the end of the matter. But should she be found alive it is believed that she would tell a story that would throw an entirely new light upon the mystery.

The name of a woman, other than Hattie Le Blanc, was mentioned frequently this afternoon, and it was hinted that there might be an important arrest soon. This woman, it is said, might have shot the man from revenge.

If Hattie Le Blanc killed herself, the river theory is the most likely one, according to the detectives, because the girl had nothing in the way of a weapon or poison with which to end her life. They think that the waters of the Charles may hide the body of the girl.

Chief of Police James H. McKenna sent out 1,000 circulars containing a picture of the missing girl and the following printed beneath:

WANTED FOR MURDER.

Harriet Le Blanc, alias Hattie Le Blanc, alias Hattie White, age seventeen, very little over 5 feet tall, medium complexion, brown hair, blue eyes, weight about 105 pounds. Had on when last seen, dark green or black coat, dark green skirt, large drab colored hat with pink trimming; is a French girl and speaks very little English. Has been employed as a domestic in private family. She was born in West Arichat, C. B., where her folks are now supposed to be living. She has four brothers named Le Blanc, and two sisters, one married to a man named Sansons, and another to a man named Muce, all living in Gloucester, Mass. Also a cousin named Sansons, living on Charles street, Auburndale, Mass. If found notify

JAMES H. McKENNA,
Chief of Police, Waltham, Mass.

One of the most puzzling things the detectives have encountered in trying to solve the mystery on the theory that Glover told

DE ARMOND, LEADER IN NATIONAL HOUSE, BURNED TO DEATH

BUTLER, Mo., Nov. 23.—Congressman David A. DeArmond and his five-year-old grandson, David A. DeArmond, 3d., were burned to death this morning in a fire which destroyed the Congressman's home in this city. They were sleeping, out of doors on the front porch. The fire apparently caught in the house, near where the two were sleeping, and all that portion of the building was in flames when neighbors reached the scene.

Some charred bones have been found, believed to be all that remains of the two bodies.

A maid servant, who slept in the rear of the house, was awakened when the flames burst into her room. She escaped in her nightclothes and ran to the front of the house. Her screams aroused the neighborhood, but no one could get near the front of the building because of the intense heat.

James A. DeArmond, a son of the Congressman and father of the boy who was burned, was one of the first to arrive. It was with difficulty that he was restrained from rushing into the flames. The other members of the family escaped. Other occupants of the house at the time of the fire and who escaped were Mrs. DeArmond, James A. DeArmond, aged thirty-five, a son of the Congressman, and a daughter, aged thirty-three.

The Congressman and his grandson were close companions. Mr. DeArmond had been sleeping out of doors for two years and had found the plan very beneficial.

Fiery Member of Congress.

Congressman David Albaugh De Armond was one of the most fiery of the leaders on the Democratic side of the House. One of his outbursts, his battle with Congressman John Sharp Williams, the minority leader, in 1907, brought him more notoriety than any other act in his Congressional career.

He was popularly supposed to be a Southerner by birth, but in fact was born in Blair County, Pa., March 18, 1844, so that he was nearly sixty-six when he died. He was brought up on a farm, educated in the common schools and at Williamsport Seminary.

When he went to Missouri he rose rapidly in politics, became a State Senator, later a Circuit Judge and then Missouri Supreme Court Commissioner.

He was first elected to Congress from Butler, Mo., in 1892, and served in ten consecutive Congresses. His progress on the minority side was rapid and he finally became one of the two Democratic members of the Committee on Rules—John

FORGERY CLAIM IN RUSSELL WILL CASE

Letters received by the parents of James Delbert Ruseau and identified by them as written by their son, which handwriting was later said to be identical with that of Daniel Blake Russell, were to-day declared to be forgeries by Handwriting Expert William C. Hingston, a witness in the Russell will case to-day. Not only did Mr. Hingston declare that the letters were forged, but he said that the postmark on the envelopes was also forged.

Mr. Hingston is testifying for the lawyers for Daniel Blake Russell, who claims half of the $500,000 left by Daniel Russell of Melrose. His claim is contested by William C. Russell, who holds the property. His lawyers claim that the claimant is an impostor and that his real name is Ruseau.

The witness said that he had examined a large number of letters addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Ruseau and signed J. D. R. and J. D. Russell.

An envelope was handed to the witness. It was addressed to Joseph Ruseau, Helena, N. Y. The witness declared that it was not written by the claimant. He was asked who did. "I can't say," replied Mr. Hingston. "It was forged." The cancellation mark on the front of the letter is dated 1907. The figure 7 is out of alignment with the 190, and it is a forged figure. What the original date was I can't state. It was not a seven.

These figures are always the same distance apart, the cancellation mark being a solid one piece of steel. It would be utterly impossible for the 7 to appear as it does if the regulation stamp was used. The address on this envelop was also forged. I can prove this by a microscopic examination. That examination shows that the writing "Mr. Joseph Ruseau," was written over the cancellation stamp. This proves that the stamp was placed on the envelope before the address.

"There is another thing about this envelope. The cancellation stamp Helena does not appear on the back, as it would have, had it been received at the Helena postoffice. My opinion is that the letter was a drop letter addressed in lead pencil, that the writing in lead was erased and written over in ink.

"The figure following the 190 was erased. The figure '7' was substituted by hand."

Letters Written Recently.

Witness Hingston was shown several other letters, all of which he declared to be forgeries. One dated February 20, 1909, from Dickinson, N. D., was received in New York three days later, according to the cancellation stamp. "As far as the stamp goes," said the witness, "that is all right. But the letter is dated February 22, and if that was so it could not have arrived in New York on the 23d, as it takes three days for letters to travel from North Dakota to New York."

One letter that he was shown was testified to as having been received several years ago. Mr. Hingston said that it could not have been written more than a month ago, as the ink had not oxidized and had not reached its natural color. "I am certain that it is not over a month old," said the witness.

More Forgeries Charged.

Requested by the postal authorities to examine certain letters, especially those where the postage stamp had been removed from the envelope, Handwriting Expert William Hingston testified that in his opinion the postage stamps had been cut from the envelope quite recently, the edges of the envelope cut being fresh and clean.

A portion of a letter which Andrew Schwirtz said was stolen from his house in North Dakota, and which it was claimed was in the handwriting of Jim Ruseau, was addressed by the claimant, according to Mr. Hingston. The address on a postal card sent from Montreal to [illegible], the expert said, was also a forgery. Originally an address had been written in pencil, but under a microscope small particles of the graphite could be seen imbedded in the envelope, which the eraser had failed to remove.

This card was placed under a powerful glass and examined carefully by Judge Lawton and counsel for William C. Russell.

Mr. Hingston will be followed by Albert Hamilton of New York, a handwriting expert. Mr. Hamilton was a witness in the Molineux trial in New York.

DEAD IN HOTEL.

BROCKTON, Nov. 23.—John W. Ross, a teamster employed by the Brockton Ice and Coal Company, killed himself with a revolver early to-day in his room in the Hotel Ralston.

The cry of a woman was heard by William Ross, brother of the dead man, who occupied a room on the same floor, just as the shot was fired, and he says he heard her rushing from the place.

The police say that this mysterious woman can shed some light on the reason for the suicide.

PUNCH ON NOSE OF O'FLAHERTY LOST THE GAME

Quarterback Daniel V. O'Flaherty of the Harvard football team to-day told for the first time that he was so dazed during most of the Harvard game that he didn't know what he was doing. Quarterback O'Flaherty's own statement puts an end to the rumors of what was the cause of the seeming confusion over signals. O'Flaherty was seen to-day while on his way to an American history lecture in the college yard. He said:

"I received a punch on the nose early in the game. I didn't know during most of the game what I was doing, I was so dazed. This accounts for the way in which I confused the signals.

"The best of feeling exists between Captain Fish and myself. He wanted to see his team win, and for this reason he interfered with and changed a number of signals which I had given. There was no feeling in it then and there is none now."

O'Flaherty's nose to-day showed the bruises which he received in Saturday's game. Men on the side lines at the game say that his jaw was ground into the dirt and the force of the blow was so great that one of his back teeth was driven out. His nose was not broken, however.

O'Flaherty is a senior and will graduate in June. His home is in South Boston.

"I did my level best," said O'Flaherty. "If there were any mistakes made, I am willing to bear part of them."

9 DEFENDANTS EXONERATED IN STEEL CASES

Two more defendants in the celebrated "steel cases" will be acquitted as a result of a motion made to-day by Joseph Cavanaugh, counsel for the Chelmsford Foundry Company and for Henry T. Ripley, manager for that concern. Cavanaugh moved that an order be entered directing a verdict of not guilty in their cases and former District Attorney Hill said he would not object.

This makes nine defendants who have been eliminated from the cases since the trial began and leaves twenty-three defendants.

Cavanaugh's motion for dismissal in these two cases was based on the claim that there was insufficient evidence to connect either the Chelmsford Foundry Company or Manager Ripley with the alleged conspiracy.

The day was taken up with arguments on points of law and the jury was excused until to-morrow. Adjournment until Monday will likely take place to-morrow night on account of the Thanksgiving holiday. The cases will be summed up next week and will probably go to the jury late next week.

GRANITE MEN ARE UNABLE TO AGREE

BARRE, Vt., Nov. 23.—As a result of the lockout in the granite business in this city, Montpelier and Northfield about 300 men have been laid off from the quarries here.

If the lockout should continue for any length of time there will be little demand for the product of the quarries and it is probable most of them will be closed.

A committee from the Northfield branch of the Cutters' Union met a special committee from the Manufacturers' Association here in an attempt to reach some kind of a settlement. Nothing definite is given out as the result of the meeting, but it is stated there is hope of an early settlement.

TWO BOSTON MEN DROWN

NEWBURYPORT, Nov. 23.—Two Boston men were drowned and two had narrow escapes to-day in the Merrimac river when a skiff in which workmen engaged in rebuilding the famous old chain bridge capsized. The drowned are:

David McKenzie, foreman of the gang, and Di Gangi Calogero, a laborer.

Those rescued were Jerry Landry and Di Gangi Gandolfo.

The old wooden supports of the steel links are being replaced by cement. A long steel cable hangs from the bridge and sweeps down into the river some distance away, where it is anchored.

The men were drawing the boat along by pulling hand over hand on the cable to the anchor. Suddenly the boat capsized.

David McKenzie and Calogero sank and did not rise. Gandolfo clung to the upturned boat, while Landry, after a hard swim, managed to reach it. The swiftly running current bore the bodies of the drowned men far down stream.

Drawtenders hastened to the rescue of the men in a boat. Chief of Police Ryan of Amesbury and several men are dragging the river for the bodies of the drowned men.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 23.—After the most exciting and bitterly contested battle for the Republican mayoralty nomination ever waged in Portland, the Hon. Charles A. Strout won out at the caucuses, carrying five of the nine wards.

20 SHIPS SINK, SCORES DROWN

MARSEILLES, Nov. 23.—Twenty sailing vessels have gone to the bottom and scores of sailors are believed drowned in a heavy storm which is sweeping the Mediterranean from Port Said to Gibraltar.

Fears are felt for two French torpedo boats and a submarine.

BIG GIFTS FOR ARMY DINNERS

Manufacturers, grocers and others are coming to the aid of the Salvation Army and making it possible for that organization to feed 4,000 persons at their Thanksgiving dinner this year, 1,000 more than last year.

Seven thousand bananas were given to the army to-day for the dinner. All the cranberries needed have been secured free from the Cape and from local dealers. Candy in plenty, all the bread required and many other supplies been obtained.

Large subscriptions of money have also been secured. One woman gave $100 and others have contributed in smaller amounts. Nearly every home in Boston that needs help or will accept it will get a dinner or help toward one.

"We are delighted with the showing," said Colonel Gifford to-day. "Only we could have fed thousands more if the authorities had not put obstacles in our way."

A NEW MASSAGE.—Mme. Cavalieri will explain it in detail in the Sunday American.

GIRL LEAPS 50 FEET OFF ROOF

Rebecca Berkner, who is eighteen years old, leaped to-day from the roof of the house at No. 30 Chambers Street court to the ground in the rear, fifty feet, and was found unconscious on the concrete walk by Isaac Pine, a neighbor. At the Relief Hospital it is said she has a good chance of recovery, although both legs are broken. She is believed to have been mentally unbalanced.

The girl worked as a maid in the home of Dr. M. L. Levine and recently has been acting strangely. She was seen going to the roof this morning. Her escape from death is considered remarkable.

A note was found in the girl's room addressed to her sister. "I am tired of life," it read. "Please arrange for me to have a proper burial." A bottle of paris green was found, but whether she took any of it or not is not known.

CONGRESSMAN PERISHES AS HOUSE BURNS

Fought with Williams.

The celebrated fist fight with Williams occurred December 19, 1907. The fight came about over a committee assignment. De Armond and Williams could never agree on anything. Representative Booher of Missouri got De Armond to speak to Williams about an assignment to the Committee on Census. Williams said that he would try, but finally put Booher on the Coinage Committee.

One of Booher's friends asked Williams how it happened, and Williams is said to have replied that De Armond was satisfied with that appointment. The friend saw De Armond and the latter got wroth. On the floor of the House he approached Williams and after some conversation called him "a liar." Instantly Williams hit De Armond. De Armond responded in kind and there was a lively fist battle on the floor of the House. The combatants were finally separated.

Foe of Roosevelt.

De Armond also gained celebrity as an antagonist of Roosevelt. He maintained in his speeches that the nation distrusted the President.

He maintained that the Constitution should be "brought up to date" and favored an amendment giving the Supreme Court sole power to pass on acts of Congress. He was a bitter opponent of Speaker Cannon's methods.

Congressman De Armond was a noted lecturer on legal subjects.

A CLOSE SHAVE

Many of Them Happening Every Day, but Soon Forgotten.

Close shaves would be of more frequent occurrence but for the tender faces of many men, which will not permit of shaving often. Heretofore, nothing has been said in these columns about poslam, a new skin discovery, in connection with its use after shaving. Its publicity and sales have been confined almost exclusively to its remarkable properties as an eczema cure; it stops the itching at once and cures the worst cases in a few days. While the application of poslam after shaving is one of its minor uses, such as for pimples, the complexion, etc., shavers will find it a revelation, as it does for abrasions, roughness and severe scrapings what it does for all manner of skin difficulties—heals and cures in a few hours. It is the only article possessing real antiseptic and curative value that has ever been exploited for this purpose, and will soothe and tone up the skin as no toilet preparation could possibly do.

Poslam can be had for fifty cents at any reliable druggist, particularly all Riker-Jaynes drug stores and Houghton & Dutton's drug dept., who make a specialty of it. Or the Emergency Laboratories, No. 32 West 25th Street, New York City, will send a trial supply free by mail to any one who will write for it. This is sufficient to show results in 24 hours.

12-YEAR-OLD BOY DEAD IN A QUEER WAY

Twelve-year-old Sumner F. Hutchinson, son of Freedom Hutchinson, a wealthy attorney of Boston, living at No. 650 Centre street, Newton, was found hanging by a silk necktie to a bedpost in his room. The boy died Saturday night, but the manner of his death was not revealed until to-day, when Medical Examiner George L. West filed his death certificate in Newton City Hall. The medical examiner says the boy's death was the result of an accident.

Sumner Hutchinson died suddenly Saturday night between 8 and 9 o'clock. Absolutely no detail was given out as to the cause of his death at that time. It was known that Dr. A. C. Cummings was hurriedly sent for by the Hutchinson family Saturday night, and that later Medical Examiner West went to the house, but neither man made public any statement.

It is told that the Hutchinson family heard Sumner moving around his room during the evening and that after a while everything became still. A member of the family had occasion to step into the room and there lay the boy, half-sprawling on the floor, a silk necktie around his neck and also around a bedpost.

Whether he was dead then or not cannot be learned. Dr. Cummings would not say nor would the medical examiner. The family refused to say anything whatsoever about the death of the little fellow.

Dr. Cummings was called at once. He came in all haste. Soon he left the house, and later Medical Examiner West visited the house. When he left he would not talk. To-day, after filing the death certificate, Dr. West did say:

"I am satisfied that the boy's death was accidental. According to stories told by members of his family, the lad was fooling in the bed when, in some manner, his necktie became caught on the bedpost and he fell in such a manner that he could not free himself. There was no apparent reason why the boy should fasten the necktie intentionally in this way nor put himself in that position."

People who know the Hutchinson family well say that the boy was rather backward lately in his studies and that reprimands from his teachers and parents had disheartened him. He was a very ambitious boy, they say.

The funeral aws held this afternoon from the family residence in Newton. The Rev. Henry S. Nash of Cambridge officiated. Interment aws in the Newton Cemetery.

NEW SOUNDS ARE HEARD IN DEATH MINE

CHERRY, Ill., Nov. 23.—Rumors were current for hours to-day that a pocket had been discovered in the St. Paul mine, from which sounds were heard indicating that a number of men were alive.

The first story that live men had been discovered in the third vein came to the surface within an hour after the big working shift of picked men had been sent down early to-day.

Superintendent W. W. Taylor declares that in his opinion the failure to find men in the air chamber means that they were engaged in a concerted effort at some one point to save their lives. Other experienced miners asserted that all the men in the third level would be found in one chamber walled up together behind a false wall, erected by themselves.

At the same time it was admitted that a great chance existed of finding a huge tangle of bodies on the twisting staircase at the foot of the air shaft between the third and second levels, at which point some of the men would have tried to make their exit toward the main shaft.

Three miners who volunteered to enter the third vein of the burning St. Paul mine narrowly escaped death early to-day when the third vein cage on which they descended became pinned midway between the second and third veins, holding its occupants prisoners for three hours, while firemen fought flames in the shaft. The men were Barney James, Frank Rogers and Harry Scotland.

Rescuers Exhausted.

Their comrades on the surface did not know whether they had met death or not. They knew that the small cage was pinned by the warped wooden guides of the main shaft somewhere in the dark, smoke-filled shaft. Working furiously, the men at the top, after a battle of four hours, lifted the cage to the second vein. The three men were exhausted and were given medical attention.

The first tangible evidence that the men in the east workings were not killed when the fire broke out on Saturday was the failure to find any corpses where it was predicted a large number would be found if the men were smothered in their first rush for safety.

Many mining implements were found, but not a dinner pail was to be seen. From this it was argued that the men, unable to escape when the fire was discovered, retreated to some extremity of the mine, carrying their food with them.

Cheered by Women.

One man who, it was supposed, was still breathing when found, was pronounced dead by the physicians of the hospital car and his body was removed to the morgue. The body was still warm, and this had led to the belief that he was alive. Tidings of the discovery were relayed rapidly to those waiting. The wife of one of the men brought out alive Saturday evening, whose brother still is one of the missing, placed her arms about one of the pathetic, shawl-draped women whose watch about the pit mouth has begun each day hours before the rising of the sun and ended long after midnight.

"Cheer up, dear," she whispered. "Didn't I tell you John would come up? There are Scotchmen down there. They will take care of them. When the men get to the ends they will find them walled in, ready for another week of it."

WANT STATE LAW TO SAVE BABIES

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 23.—As an outcome of the investigation into the cause of the deaths of twenty-four babies in the Myrtle Baby Home in East Providence since June 17 there is now a most urgent demand for the passage of an act by the Legislature which will bring all such institutions under the direct supervision of the authorities.

The whole State is aroused. Medical Examiner George F. Allison states that he will advocate the enactment of a law covering the regulation of baby homes. Within a few days he will present his report on the investigation and the autopsy on one of the little victims to Attorney-General Greenough.

FUNERAL RUSHED; PROBE GIRL'S DEATH

ATHOL, Nov. 23.—Because of the unusual haste used in burying Sophie Glendelis, a nineteen-year-old Lithuanian girl, who died at 6 o'clock in the evening and was buried at 9 the next morning, Deputy Sheriff Herbert S. Goddard and State Detective Peleg F. Murray of Worcester are here working on the mystery of the girl's death. The girl died at the home of Michael Mazonas on Hamilton street, and the police believe that some man was implicated. The fact that she called for a "herb doctor" just prior to her death lends color to this belief.

The coffin was covered with a beautiful pall of violets and a number of magnificent wreaths. Her son, the Duke of Manchester, who married Miss Zimmerman of Cincinnati, and her brother-in-law, Sir John Lister-Kaye, who married Natica Yznaga, accompanied the body on the special train.

All Wireless for Switzerland.

GENEVA—Particulars have just been printed here showing the extraordinary attraction of the Alps for Hertzian wave currents. Experiments conducted by military aerographists have proved absolutely that Switzerland is able to intercept any wireless message within a radius of 2,000 miles owing to the influence of the mountains. It will thus be seen that no aerograms sent from any part of Europe can be kept secret from the Swiss republic.

Permission to Commit Suicide.

VIENNA—The War Minister has offered a reward of $400 for a clew to the person or persons who tried to poison sixteen officers recently promoted to be captains and attached to the general staff of the army. It is hinted that the man who attempted the wholesale poisoning is himself an Austrian army officer. If this suspicion proves true, a certain time will be given him in which to commit suicide.

Duel Over Ferrer Affair.

HAVANA—A question of honor between General Miro and Senor Cabal, a journalist, was satisfactorily settled by a pistol duel. Senor Cabal was shot through the right hand, which will keep him away from his writing duties for a long time. The cause of the duel was a controversy over Dr. Ferrer, the Spanish educator recently put to death in Spain.

"Sire" Produced in Paris.

PARIS—A new play by the academician, Henry Lavedan, entitled "Sire," and based on his well-known novel, is produced at the Francais. The key to the action is the palming off of a comedian upon an old Vandeean Royalist, Mlle. De St. Salbi, as her son, Louis XVI. The presentation is admirable, Huguenot and Mlle. Pierson holding the chief roles.

SENATOR BOURNE BEAT TAFT AT GOLF

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Senator Jonathan P. Bourne of Oregon took the measure of President Taft in a golf match on the Chevy Chase Club links, defeating him fifteen holes by one up. Both played a strong game, although the exact score was not given out.

Mr. Taft especially distinguished himself in his driving, and he might have won the match had he not got into a difficult position between the seventh and eighth holes, which cost him a number of extra strokes.

ONE DOSE RELIEVES DYSPEPSIA, GAS, HEARTBURN OR INDIGESTION.

You can eat anything your stomach craves without fear of Indigestion or Dyspepsia, or that your food will ferment or sour on your stomach if you will take a little Diapepsin occasionally.

Your meals will taste good, and anything you eat will be digested; nothing can ferment or turn into acid or poison or stomach gas, which causes Belching, Dizziness, a feeling of fullness after eating, Nausea, Indigestion (like a lump of lead in stomach), Biliousness, Heartburn, Water brash, Pain in stomach or intestines or other symptoms.

Headaches from the stomach are absolutely unknown where this effective remedy is used. Diapepsin really does all the work of a healthy stomach. It digests your meals when your stomach can't. A single dose will digest all the food you eat and leave nothing to ferment or sour and upset the stomach.

Get a large 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from your druggist and start taking now, and in a little while you will actually brag about your healthy, strong Stomach, for you then can eat anything and everything you want without the slightest discomfort or misery, and every particle of impurity and Gas that is in your stomach and intestines is going to be carried away without the use of laxatives or any other assistance.

Should you at this moment be suffering from Indigestion or any stomach disorder, you can get relief within five minutes.

WILL SEIZE NICARAGUAN CUSTOM FEES

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 23.—The cabinet went into session to-day soon after 10 o'clock, with all the members present. The first matter considered was the Nicaraguan situation. Custom house frauds in New York were also discussed. It is believed here that soon after the cabinet adjourns an active movement will begin against President Zelaya. Washington is expecting to hear very soon that orders have been issued to seize Nicaraguan custom houses.

That President Taft intends to entirely eliminate Zelaya from Central American politics, because he has been for years a disturbing factor in Central America, is well understood here now. The administration is tired of the continual turmoil in Central America due to the ambition and activities of Zelaya and the murder of Groce and Cannon.

Taft Supporting Knox.

President Taft has supported the active policy of Secretary of State Knox, and the Cabinet as a whole is known to be in favor of this aggressive plan. On the gunboat Vicksburg and the cruiser Des Moines, which were ordered to Nicaragua, there is but a small force of marines. On the former boat there are 130 bluejackets and on the latter 280. The transport Buffalo, however, can be dispatched with 380 marines at short notice. The Buffalo is due at Panama within a short time.

With the Vicksburg and the Des Moines on the Nicaraguan coast, the Buffalo ready to hurry a force of marines to the coast of the turbulent little republic and the gunboat Marietta, carrying 135 jack tars, due at Port Limon, Costa Rica, the American government already has in the field or within hailing distance a force large enough to cope with a serious situation.

400 Marines Wait Orders.

Smaller forces have done big work in South and Central America before this. Other fighting men are held in readiness, however. The cruiser Albany, with 280 sailors and the Yorktown with 175 were to-day under orders to take on coal at Magdalena Bay, lower California. Besides these preparations 400 or more marines at Philadelphia are prepared to ship at a moment's notice for the Nicaraguan coast. These men will probably leave on Saturday on the Prairie, but may be ordered into action before if the situation demands it. Although it would be difficult, say naval men, for a battleship to be of service in the shallow waters of the Nicaraguan coast about the principal ports, there are several smaller craft in the navy that could be hurried South without delay.

26 AMERICANS ARE REPORTED IN PRISON; EXECUTIONS FEARED

COLON, Nov. 23.—The U. S. cruiser Des Moines, according to a wireless dispatch received here to-day from Port Limon, Costa Rica, is bound for Greytown, Nicaragua, to investigate the report that twenty-six American citizens are imprisoned in President Zelaya's jails and are subject to maltreatment. Late reports from Nicaragua state that Zelaya's hatred of Americans has come to the surface and that he accuses them in posters plastered up at many points of being the cause of the revolution led by General Estrada. Several Americans are believed to be secreted in Zelaya's military prisons, if they have not been summarily executed.

INSURGENT CHIEF'S BROTHER IS UNDER DEATH SENTENCE

PORT LIMON, Costa Rica, Nov. 23.—News reaching here from Managua says that Aurelio Estrada, brother of the insurgent leader, and Jose Dolores Gomez, former Minister of Foreign Relations, are in prison in the Nicaraguan capital condemned to death. Gomez's execution was ordered because he refused to sign a protest addressed to the insurgents calling on them to halt their revolution.

Zelaya condemned Estrada's brother to death on general principles. The main reason, it is believed here, is that Zelaya thinks Aurelio Estrada is the head of the rebel junta in the capital.

There are hundreds of persons in prison in Managua, many of them condemned to death for revolutionary sympathies, and it is expected here that unless Washington acts quickly Zelaya's massacres of his enemies will mount into the hundreds.

INSURGENTS EMBARK ON SAN JUAN RIVER TO ATTACK CAPITAL

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 23.—A cable dispatch from Port Limon says General Chamorra has laid siege to Greytown. General Toledo, it is asserted, is about to surrender, owing to lack of ammunition and food. The insurgents are embarking on the San Juan river to move against Managua. A San Jose paper says President Zelaya claims he has secured permission to occupy Costa Rican territory.

CHINESE ON DEATH TRIP?

Bent on vengeance, twelve Chinamen have left Boston secretly in the last few days for New York, it was learned to-day. To hide their plans the men went one by one. As far as known all the men were members of the On Leong Tong, three of whose members were recently executed here for shooting up Chinatown and killing members of the Hep Sing Tong.

Chief Watts of the detective bureau believes the men are going to New York to avenge the deaths of their comrades who were convicted on testimony furnished by members of the Hep Sing Tong, whose largest eastern colony is in New York. His letter warning the Gotham police follows:

> Our Chinatown detectives get information that a number of Chinamen, known as Gee Young, Young Dan, Moy Guey, Ow Tong, Gee Wah, Wong Gin, Wong Hoy, Ong Minmon, all members of the On Leong Tong, have gone to New York for the purpose of revenging the deaths of Tong members who have recently killed there. Gee Young is said to be a dangerous Chinaman, and said to have been arrested in Chicago for shooting a Chinaman there.
>
> Both the On Leong and Hip Sings have been stirred up here of late on account of the electrocution of three Chinamen.

MUSEUM FUND GOES TO $144,595

The Museum of Fine Arts, in its opening week, had an attendance of 28,853, and the sum of $144,595 was contributed to the maintenance fund. There were 8,676 present at the three large receptions, making the total number who have enjoyed the exhibitions in the new building 37,529.

For the fund to defray the running expenses the trustees have asked $1,250,000.

EASIER TO PREVENT

Most physicians are agreed that the best way to combat most ills is by the indirect method of stimulating the body's natural powers in fighting and destroying the germs of disease. Consumption, for example, is much easier to prevent than it is to cure, and throughout the land a determined warfare is being waged to lessen the danger of infection by this insidious disease. Coughs and colds are a prolific source and should not be neglected.

At the first sign of a cold, steps should be taken to check it at once, and this can best be done with a simple mixture of two ounces of Glycerine, a half-ounce of Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure and eight ounces of pure Whisky. These can be mixed together in a large bottle. Shake well and take a teaspoonful every four hours. It is claimed by the Leach Chemical Co., of Cincinnati, who prepare the Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure for dispensing through druggists, that this mixture will break up a cold in twenty-four hours and cure any cough that is curable.

LITTLE GIRL HOLDS KEY TO BIG MURDER MYSTERY

POLICE START GENERAL HUNT TO LOCATE HATTIE LE BLANC, ACCUSED BY DYING MAN.

By JOHN J. M'MAHON.

A PRETTY seventeen-year-old housemaid holds the key to one of the greatest murder mysteries in the history of New England.

She is Hattie Le Blanc, a French-Canadian, alleged by the police to have shot and killed her employer, Clarence F. Glover, a rich young business man of Waltham.

She is a fugitive. A general alarm has been sent out for her capture. She disappeared following the tragedy Saturday night and has not been seen since. The police believe she is hiding in Waltham.

Glover, in his dying statement, named her as the person who fired the fatal shots. He failed to tell of a motive for the tragedy. Although he was conscious for three hours following the shooting, he told none of the facts leading up to the tragedy. He remained silent on the very things that would have cleared up the mystery.

There are many peculiar features connected with the case. Many of these tend to implicate a third person.

Did Glover shield somebody?

Was he slain by a mysterious third person?

Did this girl gain entrance to the Waltham laundry by an unopened cellar window and shoot Glover from behind?

Did Glover recognize this person when, after being hit by the first bullet, he turned around to defend himself?

Did the Le Blanc girl also recognize the assailant?

Did she flee because she thought she might be blamed for the crime?

These are the many perplexing questions yet to be solved. The case abounds in more puzzles than any murder mystery in the criminal annals of Massachusetts.

Dying Statement Whole Case.

The police are working on the assumption that the Le Blanc girl killed Glover. Their entire case is based on his dying statement. All of the facts thus far brought to light indicate, however, that there was a third person connected with the tragedy, and that it may have been this unknown man or woman who fired the fatal shots.

Several persons have been mentioned as logical suspects. All would have a motive for killing Glover. Not one of these persons has been closely questioned by the police.

On the other hand, although the police charge Hattie Le Blanc with having killed her employer, they have thus far failed to show any motive for the crime. Outside of Glover's dying statement, the police to date have absolutely no evidence to support their charge that the housemaid killed Glover.

Assailant Taller Than Glover?

It yet remains to be determined whether or not some person, yet unknown to the police, trailed Glover and Hattie Le Blanc to the Waltham laundry on Saturday night, surprised them and shot Glover. It also remains to be decided whether this person deliberately and calmly plotted the young laundryman's death.

The course taken by the first bullet—the fatal bullet—was downward. It proves one of two things: That the person who shot Glover was taller than he was, or that Glover was sitting in a chair when the shot was fired.

Every reasonable inference is that Glover, at the time the first shot was fired, was standing. If this is true it eliminates Miss Le Blanc, as she was a small girl, and it would be a physical impossibility for a person of her height and strength to discharge a revolver so that the bullet would penetrate so high and be deflected downward.

Again, if this is true, it would indicate that the shot was fired by a person who had suddenly entered the room from behind Glover and attacked him before he had a chance to turn and defend himself.

The police, however, say that the tragedy took place in the "ironing room" in the rear of the building. They further say that a chair was found overturned and that Glover was sitting in this chair when he was shot.

But here are the facts. There were other chairs in that room, but they had not been used. They were under the tables. On the face of it, it does not appear consistent that the Le Blanc girl moved around until she got behind Glover, and then shot him.

General appearances—and they are the only things that anybody at work on the case has to go by—indicate these important points:

Glover and Hattie Le Blanc were standing facing each other.

Somebody—and that somebody must have had access to Glover's revolver—suddenly appeared on the scene and shot Glover from behind.

Now as to the vital point of the entire case. Hattie Le Blanc must have been looking toward the direction from which the shot was fired. It was a big room with no partitions. Did she see someone make his or her way silently down the room and shoot Glover? Was she so petrified with fear that she was unable to cry out. Was she aware of the purpose of the assailant?

All that took place in that room on Saturday night will remain a mystery until Hattie Le Blanc is found—or until some one else tells of the death scene. The general belief, eliminating Glover's dying statement, is that there is a third person in the case.

One Misstatement.

The question remains, how much weight can be placed on Glover's statement. He directly accused the Le Blanc girl with having killed him. He declared he was shot while he was in the laundry. He said the revolver with which he was shot was owned by him. He repeatedly declared he wrested the revolver from the hands of Hattie Le Blanc.

One thing he said, however, has been proved to be incorrect. He declared he lifted the office window and threw the revolver into the State reservation next the laundry. This would be impossible, however, as there are double windows on the office, and these cannot be opened.

Even if the office windows could be opened, it is not believed that he would walk, in his weakened condition from the rear of the building, open the office door and windows and throw the revolver away. Knowing the exits as he did, it would be his first impulse to get out by the nearest door, which is within a few feet of where the shooting took place. And that is in the extreme rear of the building. The revolver, it is now thought, he threw away while staggering down the alley to Dr. Cousens' Hospital.

As far as the police have been able to learn, Glover never carried a revolver. He never kept one at the laundry. Did Hattie Le Blanc take one of Glover's revolvers with her when she left the house, or was it taken by some one else who had access to the Glover home?

On his death bed Glover was asked this important question:

"Whose revolver was it?"

"It was mine," the dying man answered.

In the few minutes that Glover had the revolver, after he had taken it away from his assailant and before he threw it away, how was he able to recognize it as his own? Did he make a critical examination of it? It was like any other .38-calibre revolver and had no distinguishing marks.

All this leads up to the proposition that Glover recognized his assailant; that he realized that person's purpose, and that he also realized by intuition that the gun must have been taken from his home.

What took place in the laundry is a mystery as yet. But what is just as important in unraveling the mystery is what took place prior to the shooting.

The Chronology of the Case.

These are the facts in the case, of things that have been vouched for as facts by various persons.

The Glovers had dinner at 6 o'clock. Hattie Le Blanc prepared the meal.

Glover left his home at about 6:35, saying he was going to wash his automobile and put it up. He, his wife, Hattie Le Blanc and the Freemans had been auto riding during the afternoon.

Hattie Le Blanc left the house at 7, or 7:06. She said she was going to Boston.

At 8:20 Glover and the Le Blanc girl were seen at the Copley Square Hotel. They had three glasses of lager apiece.

At 9:10 Mrs. Ella Grinnell, passing by the laundry in Waltham, heard a shot. She saw no one.

At 9:12 Glover was found reeling up the steps of Dr. Nicholas W. Cousens. He said he had been shot by Hattie Le Blanc.

At 9:45 Mrs. Glover arrived at Dr. Cousens' Hospital, in answer to a telephone communication. She would not go to the bedside of her dying husband.

At 11:15 there came a telephone call, said to be from the Glover home, asking for the dying man's condition.

About fifteen minutes later there came a similar call.

At about 11:45 there came another call. This time the person who was at the other end of the line asked Dr. Cousens, according to the physician: "Did he incriminate or blame his wife?"

At 12:11 Glover died.

At about the same time the police found Glover's big, six-cylinder, Winton touring car on Spruce street, about a quarter of a mile from the laundry.

To review these circumstances is in order. All that the police have to show that the Glovers had dinner at the hour named is Mrs. Glover's statement.

When first questioned, Mrs. Glover said it was 7 o'clock when her husband left her home, and about an hour later when her maid went out. She changed these times to those given above, after a conference with her attorney, Samuel D. Elmore.

The persons who saw Glover and the maid at the Copley Square Hotel stand by their statement. They refuse to budge, even though it was pointed out to them that it would take at least a half hour to go from Waltham to Boston. If Glover and his companion had entered the hotel at 8:20 and stayed there only ten minutes it would have taken great speed to get to Waltham at 9 o'clock, the hour at which Glover was shot.

As to Mrs. Grinnell's story, the police have serious doubts. They think she undoubtedly believed she heard a shot, but nevertheless they think she is mistaken.

"Did He Blame Wife?

On all the other remaining features there is only one denial. That is that anybody from the Glover home called up Dr. Cousens at about 11:45 o'clock and asked this question: "Did he incriminate or blame his wife?"

Mrs. Glover refuses to be seen; refuses to be questioned. Her attorney, however, denies that anybody asked such a question. Dr. Cousens says that somebody asked him that question. Moreover, he is extremely positive of it.

Who was in the automobile when it stopped on Spruce street is still a mystery. Nobody heard it. Nobody knew it was there, as far as the police can learn, until they discovered it shortly after midnight Sunday morning.

POLICE QUESTION WIDOW FOR GLOVER DEATH CLEW

all of the truth when he said Hattie Le Blanc shot him, is that they cannot find a motive for such an action on the part of the girl. One theory that has been advanced is that Glover promised to elope with the Le Blanc girl in the same manner as Bernard L. Tarbox of Boston ran away in his automobile with Gertrude Dexter, and that Glover backed down.

Will Question Widow.

Those who advance this theory say that the girl probably left the house to join Glover, thinking that he might refuse to do as he had promised, and that she took his revolver with her intending to end his life unless he kept his word.

There are many facts about the puzzling case which the police believe that Lillian Marie Glover, the widow of the dead man, could give them that would help in clearing the mystery. Detectives went to the Glover home this afternoon to have a long talk with Mrs. Glover on these matters.

Dentists throughout New England were asked by the police to-day to be on the lookout for Hattie Le Blanc. She has a tooth that was to have been treated in Waltham early this week by Dr. John C. Manning, a dentist in the Lawrence Block, and if the girl is alive the tooth must be giving her a great deal of trouble, the dentist said to-day.

Treated by Dentist.

"The girl had been coming to me for treatment for some time," said Dr. Manning to-day. "It was on Friday or Saturday morning that she was here last. She wanted a tooth crowned and I was treating the nerve, which was almost exposed. She was to be back to-day, I think it was, to have another treatment.

"If she is alive, she must be having a bad toothache by this time, and she is pretty sure to visit a dentist."

Miss Julia Foutas, who is Dr. Manning's assistant, said:

"When Hattie Le Blanc was here last she seemed to be in the best of spirits, and apparently had nothing on her mind to worry her. She was usually accompanied by Mrs. Glover, who talked to her in French and translated for us."

Police Inspector McKenna said to-day:

"We have come to the conclusion that Hattie Le Blanc is either dead or is being protected by some one who has a motive for such protection. We expect new developments very soon."

Meantime, the search for Hattie Le Blanc is being prosecuted with vigor. And the little French-speaking fugitive so far has completely baffled every effort to locate her.

A ray of hope came to the police when they received a telegraphic message from Portland, Me., informing them that a girl whose description was exactly similar to that of Hattie Le Blanc had been arrested on a train bound for New Brunswick. But that hope was dispelled soon after, when another message came saying that the girl in custody had completely identified herself as a housemaid until recently employed at Fitchburg en route to her former home in New Brunswick.

Has Not Been in Gloucester.

The belief is entertained that the girl set out for Gloucester, where she has two half-brothers and five half-sisters. All these, however, have assured the Gloucester police that Hattie Le Blanc has not been with them, and the Gloucester police are certain that they are telling the truth.

Still unaccounted for is the girl with the French accent who was ferried across the river at Annisquam and who started from there in the direction of Gloucester. Fred Wise, who owned the motor boat in which she crossed, is positive that she corresponded in appearance with the furnished description of Hattie Le Blanc; others who saw her say that she was dressed differently. The Gloucester police have been unable to get a trace of that girl.

So far as is known, Hattie Le Blanc had only seventy-five cents when she left the Glover house. That amount would not carry her far, nor would it provide her with food and shelter for any length of time. It is not believed that robbery had a part in the crime, as Glover had $29 and some change in his pockets when he died. Still, he had had $80 earlier in the day, and it is not known that he made more than nominal expenditures out of that amount.

Aunt's Home Under Surveillance.

The home of Mrs. Ernest Sansana, aunt of the Le Blanc girls, in Newton, is under police surveillance, as it is thought possible that Hattie Le Blanc would go there for food and shelter.

Mrs. George A. Freeman of Auburndale, who went to Mrs. Glover's home directly she learned of the shooting, is still staying with the widow. Her testimony as to the events of Saturday evening is considered of importance. Mrs. Freeman denies that the query propounded to Dr. Cousens, as to whether Glover had "implicated" his wife in the statement which he made went out over the telephone from Mrs. Glover's house. She also has said that she spent three quarters of an hour on the telephone with Mrs. Glover just previous to the time of the shooting.

The funeral of Glover will be practically private. The employes of the laundry will be given an opportunity to view the body, but will not attend the service. The funeral director in charge has been instructed to have only twenty-four chairs for the service.

Only a Baby.

Everyone knows Mr. F., the famous real estate lawyer. For a client, Mr. Dean, he was examining title for a house and lot on Newton street, long occupied by Miss Belden and her two sisters, as owners. Sending for Miss Belden, he learned that those ladies had inherited the property from their father, the last owner of record, who had died without leaving a will. Asked if she ever had other brothers and sisters, she said one brother, deceased. "Did he leave children surviving?" "None." The title, on examination, appearing otherwise clear, Mr. F. approved it and Mr. Dean paid $10,000, the price, and moved into it. Last year a young Mr. Belden appeared and claimed part ownership, as child of the deceased brother. Miss Belden, still living, nearly ninety years old, was seen by Mr. F. and asked if the claimant was not necessarily an imposter. "Oh, no," she said, "he is my nephew." "Yes, but twenty years ago you told me your brother died leaving no children." "Well, maybe I did," she replied, "but then, you know, he was only a baby!" The claim of "the Baby" was of course good.

That title was not insured and the new owner lost.

6 MONTHS FOR NON-SUPPORT

"All that the laws allows me to give you is six months," said Judge Bragg in the Charlestown Police Court to-day to Murray Adams, a Boston & Maine brakeman, who was charged by his wife with failing to support her and their four children. "I wish I could give you six years."

Adams lives now at No. 7 Waverly street, Somerville. His wife and children live at No. 56 Haverhill street, Charlestown.

The wife was in court with a boy of eleven, and a very pretty daughter of seventeen to testify against her husband. She said he had deserted her. Adams appealed, and the judge held him in $500 bail.

ABRAHAM MORRILL, 90, DEAD AT WOBURN

Abraham F. Morrill of Woburn died today, aged ninety years. He had been a resident of Woburn sixty-five years and up to a few years ago worked at his trade of carpenter and machinist. He was born at Newburyport and at the age of nine years began life as a cabin boy in one of the ships sailing from that port. After a few voyages as cabin boy, he came to Boston, where he shipped before the mast, making several voyages to European ports. After leaving the sea he went to Woburn.

BANKER SOON TO QUIT CELL

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 23.—An agreement which will result in the freeing from jail of Thomas B. Taylor, the Boston banker, who has been imprisoned here in the county jail since March 31 of 1908, was reached here to-day between Taylor's lawyers and counsel for John P. Beagan, receiver for Taylor's defunct New England Trust Company and other banking institutions.

By this agreement the suit to recover $350,000 brought on behalf of depositors in the trust companies is dropped, and Taylor gives his note for $50,000, payable in two years to the receiver. Former Speaker of the House Joseph B. Burlingham is to act as trustee for all of Taylor's banking concerns during the next two years. The agreement was to-day decided upon at a hearing before Justice William B. Tanner in the Superior Court. Taylor founded the Day and Night Bank of Boston.

UNIONS TO HELP FUND FOR SCHOOL

That the trade unions of Greater Boston should contribute toward the building fund of the $80,000 parochial school being erected by St. Margaret's parishioners at Dorchester because the pastor of that church insisted on a strict union clause in all contracts on the school is stated in a circular letter received by the building trades unions to-day. The church is preparing to hold a fair to help raise money for the school.

OLD AGE PENSION PLANS DISCUSSED

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Old age pensions to-day absorbed the attention of the distinguished delegates who are in New York from all over the country to attend the annual convention of the National Civic Federation. The system of pensioning used by many private enterprises and by the British Government were reviewed and the matter was regarded from every viewpoint, many of the delegates urging the general adoption of the system.

LATHAM GOES TO HUNT IN AIRSHIP

PARIS, Nov. 23.—Herbert Latham flew from Chalons to Berru to-day, a distance of nineteen miles, in thirty minutes, to attend a hunting party to which he had been invited by the Marquis de Polignac, president of the committee on aviation. Latham's unexpected appearance caused a furore.

VORENBERG'S Washington, Hanover and Elm Streets

RUMOR ELLIS WILL WITHDRAW TO HELP STORROW CAMPAIGN

David A. Ellis, according to rumor to-day, is to withdraw from the contest for School Committee, not at the request of Mayoralty Candidate James J. Storrow, but at the request of men who will line up for Storrow if they are allowed to name a School Committee candidate. It is said that the Republican city machine will be permitted to name a substitute for the Ellis candidacy.

The declaration for Storrow by President James Donovan of the Democratic City Committee, the likelihood of a split in the Donovan machine, and guesses as to what will happen at to-night's session of the Committee of One Hundred and Fifty in Wesleyan Hall were other topics for discussion among politicians to-day.

The statement by former Alderman Patrick Bowen that "the Quincy Club doesn't stand for anything and one hundred clubs like it couldn't take Ward 9 away from John F. Fitzgerald," makes politicians certain that Ward 9 is going to be one of the principal battle scenes in the mayoralty contest.

Betting on Ward Nine.

There is wonderment as to what Donovan's lieutenants will do. Some of them already have gone to the Fitzgerald camp. Others, to quote themselves, are "playing cosey." Many of them will support Storrow, but are waiting for the psychological moment at which to declare themselves.

Donovan's declaration for Storrow was expected, but not so soon. Mr. Donovan's closest friends say that he told them two days ago that he would stay way up on the fence and that he'd probably vote for some other candidate than Storrow or Fitzgerald.

Politicians who profess to know what they're talking about offered to-day to bet real money that Ward 9 will not go for Storrow if John J. Attridge and Daniel J. McDonald are not endorsed at to-night's session of the One Hundred and Fifty. Others offered to bet that Ward 9 will not go for Storrow under any conditions. One of these was Patrick Bowen.

The report that McDonald is to be endorsed by the Committee of Nine headed by Nathan Matthews is one of the big sensations of the campaign thus far. Nobody is using the word "deal," but a good many are pointing to a visit yesterday by Donovan and McDonald to members of the Committee of Nine and coupling it with the endorsement of Mr. Storrow by Donovan's Quincy Club.

The Council Slate.

While the Matthews Committee of Nine has not yet finished its deliberations over the slate of nine for the new City Council, all signs point to the choice of these men: John J. Attridge of Ward 9, Michael H. Sullivan of Ward 20, Logan L. McLean of Ward 1, Thomas J. Kenney of Ward 15, George C. McCabe of Ward 25 and Daniel J. McDonald of Ward 3, Democrats; and Walter Ballantyne of Ward 17, Matthew Hale of Ward 11 and Frank L. Young of Ward 24, Republicans.

The name of Councilman Frank Goodwin of East Boston will not go on the slate of the Matthews nine. Nathan Matthews, it is said, has effectively disposed of the Goodwin boom in his committee by offering to swallow Matt Hale if his associates will help him dump Goodwin.

2 BARGES RAM LINER SACHEM

Rammed in the dark by a tug and two barges, the Warren liner Sachem, which came into her dock at Charlestown to-day, had a narrow escape early to-day while anchored in President's Roads. The bow plates of the ship were ripped up and she was otherwise damaged amidships. The fate of the barges and the tug is unknown, as they disappeared in the dark. "We came to anchor in President's roads at about 11 p. m.," said Captain Murdock, "and we were sound asleep when a crash threw me from my bunk. I got out on deck in time to see the barges that had smashed into us glide by. Following the first collision the second barge ran into us amidships, but with less force."

The Sachem was due yesterday, but was delayed by heavy storms. She brought a large cargo and two stowaways, one of whom, an Englishman, will be deported.

FELLS WOMAN IN TUNNEL ROW

Before the eyes of hundreds of passengers in the Friend street station of the Washington street tunnel, George Ryan of Medford street, Malden, is alleged to have struck Mrs. Laura M. Cummings, a pretty Charlestown woman, in the face because she accidentally jostled him.

Mrs. Cummings and her husband were leaving an Elevated train when Mrs. Cummings brushed by Ryan. Without a word, so the police say, Ryan raised his arm and felled Mrs. Cummings. She was so seriously injured that she was sent to the Relief Hospital.

Special Officers Walde and Dunn, who are stationed in the tunnel, placed Ryan under arrest, charging him with assault.

BISHOP GIVES CUP FOR HUB AERO CLUB

Courtland F. Bishop of New York was the guest of the Boston Aero Club at its meeting and banquet and took up the suggestion of Secretary William Carroll Hill that a trophy for the longest New England balloon flight be offered, by promising to give such a trophy himself. He also announced that the next international contest for flying machines and balloons would doubtless be in October, 1910, at Denver. Charles J. Glidden was elected president.

RICH WOMAN SHOPLIFTER IS FINED $50

Mrs. L. H. A. Schwartz of No. 1809 Beacon street, Brookline, wife of a rich cotton importer, with offices at No. 713 Exchange Building, pleaded guilty in the Municipal Court to-day to a charge of shoplifting and paid a fine of $50. Mrs. Schwartz was arrested by Inspector Knox at a store, after being watched by Miss Caroline Miller, a store detective, and had in her possession, according to the police, a kimono, corset cover, waist and collar. She went to her home accompanied by Inspector Knox and gave up $17 worth of property taken at previous times.

The hearing before Judge Parmenter was carried on in whispers. Mrs. Schwartz, who was dressed in a black broadcloth suit and wore a black chinchilla hat, has traveled much and is well known in Brookline.

LYNN DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS TO-NIGHT

LYNN, Nov. 23.—James E. Rich, the "motorman Mayor," and William H. Kelley, a lawyer, will end their contest for the Democratic nomination for Mayor at the caucuses to-night. It is anticipated that a large vote will be cast, but Mayor Rich's supporters are claiming his nomination by a large majority.

Kelley in his long and vigorous campaign has opposed license, while Rich has been non-committal on the subject. The No-License League is supporting Kelley. The winner will be opposed by John B. Newhall, the Republican nominee, at the election.

CAN SECURE DAMAGES FOR ILLEGAL SEARCH

The Supreme Court has decided that Samuel J. Lowe, a deputy commissioner of the Fish and Game Commission, is liable in damages to William P. Dunn. The latter lives in Dartmouth, buys and sells lobsters. On September 7, 1907, while passing through New Bedford with two sacks of lobsters, Dunn was stopped by Lowe, who opened the sacks and after measuring the lobsters returned them to Dunn. The case came up to test the constitutionality of the statute and the right to search without a warrant.

BIG FIRE SWEEPS CANASTOTA, N. Y.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 23.—Fire that threatened to destroy the entire town of Canastota broke out to-day. In three hours the blaze did $200,000 damage. Among the first buildings destroyed were the Bruce Opera House block and the Northrup block, the two largest structrues in the town. An appeal for aid was sent to Syracuse and fire apparatus was rushed to Canastota from here. The town was nearly wiped out about twenty years ago.

CROCKER NEAR DEATH.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The family of George Crocker, the California millionaire, were to-day summoned to his bedside here. He is dying of cancer in his home at No. 1 East Sixty-fourth street. He is the youngest son of the late Charles Crocker, the California pioneer, who left a great fortune.

15,000 WAIST MAKERS OUT

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Fifteen thousand shirtwaist makers, of whom 12,000 are women, went on strike to-day in New York and withing a week the other 25,000 members of Shirtwaist Makers' Union No. 25 will quit work unless the employers capitulate.

The strikers demand recognition of the union, an increase in wages from 25 to 30 per cent, and a fifty-two-hour week.

GAYNOR FOR PRESIDENT

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—"William J. Gaynor is one of the biggest men, if not the biggest man, in the country. He is big enough to be President, and I shall be surprised if he is not the Democratic nominee in 1912," said Chairman William J. Conners, of the Democratic State Committee, at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Conners lunched and spent several hours with the Mayor-elect at the Gaynor country home, St. James, L. I. His practical declaration for Gaynor for President was in response to the question:

"It is reported you have transferred your affections from McClellan to Gaynor, and that you will favor Gaynor's nomination for Governor next Fall."

"I am not transferring my affections from any one man to another," was Conner's first answer. "I am very fond of Mayor McClellan, and have frequently said so. Judge Gaynor and I have also been very warm friends for many years. We have met very frequently and we have always agreed on questions of Democratic party policy."

WAS LINCOLN'S COUSIN.

AYER, Nov. 23.—Mrs. Nellie Moore, the second cousin of Abraham Lincoln, is dead at her home on Grove street. She was born in Missouri, July 20, 1846, and is survived by a half-sister, living in Utah, and by her husband, Charles W. Moore, whom she married at Cincinnati in 1885.

DARK CLOUDS SHADOW CITY; COLD COMING

Black clouds which rolled up from the horizon shortly before noon to-day looked as though the city was to be treated to a genuine July or August thunderstorm. Drizzling rains fell at times during the early morning hours and the streets were slippery with pasty mud.

Conditions were extremely disagreeable. The night had been dark and warm and the weather generally what is called "Unseasonable." Mighty bad weather for the poulterer who is naturally looking for the best prices on his stock for Thanksgiving.

But—it's going to get far colder by tomorrow. The weather is due for a change late to-day.

The official forecast for to-day is for: Showers this afternoon; to-night fair, and much colder to-morrow. Northwest to westerly winds moderate.

This "disturbance" as the Weather Bureau gravely calls it comes from the Ohio and Mississippi valleys where it was raining yesterday.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

TICKET SHARPERS CAUGHT IN A TRAP

Speculators who sent in money for tickets to the Yale-Harvard game of last Saturday and failed to get away with the tickets will lose about $1,000 because of the precautions taken by the Harvard athletic authorities. Some of the speculators applied for tickets this year and signed the names of Harvard men. These applicants will be asked to call for their money in person and wherever possible will be prosecuted if they call. Many of them refused to accept the tickets sent to them by the Harvard authorities because of the stipulation that they sign the Harvard man's name before the postal authorities gave up the coveted pasteboards. Three thousand tickets were kept from the speculators by this precaution, and it was this that made it possible to sell tickets at the gate when they were bringing fabulous prices on the street.

REPORTS TORTURE OF CHILDREN ON CONGO

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—That atrocities, including mutilation and enslavement, are still committed on the natives of the Congo by the rubber companies in the name of King Leopold of Belgium, was the charge made to-day by Dr. William H. Leslie, physician of the Baptist missions of that part of Africa, when he arrived from Africa. The doctor saw one child with both hands cut off, several children with the right hand chopped off, and knew that baskets filled with hands of natives had been delivered to the Belgian officers by the cannibal soldiers sent to hunt down rubber workers who had not turned in enough material to the companies.

With youth and a perfect constitution to aid her, it is believed that Miss Barbara will be fully recovered within a few weeks.

BODY OF SAILOR ON HULL YACHT FOUND

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The police of the Jamaica Bay Harbor squad to-day found floating in the channel the body of one of the two sailors of the yacht Commodore, which, with Washington Hull, the wealthy architect and its owner on board, disappeared on November 3. This made it practically certain that the yacht was destroyed and all on board drowned.

HEADACHES AND DIZZY SPELLS

Were Caused by a Bloodless Condition in This Vermont Girl's Case.

Anæmia is simply lack of blood.

It is one of the most common and dangerous diseases with which growing girls suffer.

It is common because the blood so often becomes impoverished during development, when girls are too frequently allowed to overstudy, overwork and suffer from lack of exercise. It is dangerous because of the stealthiness of its approach, often being well developed before its presence is recognized, and because of its tendency to grow so steadily worse, if not promptly checked, that it may run into consumption.

Miss Julia V. Monahan, of No. 161 Granger street, Rutland, Vt., took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the early stages of anæmia and was undoubtedly saved from a long sickness. She says:

"In the fall of 1906 I was very much run down from overstudy. The doctor said I had anæmia but his medicine did not not seem to help me. I was pale and became very thin. I had headaches every few days which made me feel sick all over. My appetite was poor and what I ate didn't seem to agree with me. Occasionally I had dizzy spells and was confined to the bed for two weeks.

"A cousin, who had been benefited by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, advised me to give them a trial. I did so and had taken them only a short time when I began to have some color in my face. The headaches left me as I continued with the pills and I have been well ever since. I hope that other girls, who are suffering as I did, will take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

The treatment of anæmia with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is as certain as anything in medical science. They act directly on the blood, which they purify and build up to its normal strength.

They have also cured rheumatism, after-effects of the grip and fevers, stomach trouble, nervous breakdown, sick headaches, St. Vitus' dance and neuralgia. A booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," will be sent free to any sufferer from anæmia upon request.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are for sale by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

MYSTERIOUS SLAYER FOILS ARMED POSSE

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 23.—Twenty policemen and eighty citizens searched the woods all night for the slayer of Charles H. Fellows, a rich grocer of this city who was shot and killed late last night just as he drove into the yard of his farmhouse at Bow. That Mr. Fellows was murdered is the belief of his wife and of City Marshal Kimball. A large sum of money was found in the pockets of the dead man, proving that robbery was evidently not his slayer's motive.

"This is one of the most mysterious and puzzling murders in the history of New Hampshire," said City Marshal Kimball to-day. "We have no clew whatever. We don't know by whom Fellows was killed. All he could say was: 'I'm shot,' as he fell into the arms of his wife from his buggy when she rushed out after hearing shots as he drove into the yard."

No Clew Found In Woods.

High Sheriff Smith, Marshal Kimball, Captain Flanders, twenty policemen and eight volunteer citizens searched the woods all night with lanterns, yet could find nothing. To-day the search is being continued.

Following the direction in which Fellows pointed as he fell from his carriage, Sheriff Smith and other officers found the foot prints of a man in the mud. These led toward Manchester as far as the tracks of the Boston & Maine Railroad. The entire police force is trying to-day to pick up the trail.

Mr. Fellows, who ran a grocery store on South street in this city, was shot when a short distance from home. He had left his store about 10 o'clock and carried quite a sum of money. About 10:30 Mrs. Fellows, who was expecting him, heard two pistol shots. A minute later Mr. Fellows's horse ran into the yard. Mrs. Fellows could not see her husband and ran out to the carriage. Then she found him lying across the seat. He was barely conscious and cried out "I'm shot." At the same time he seemed to be trying to point toward Bow Mills as though his assailant had fled in that direction. Mrs. Fellows attempted to raise him from the carriage and he died in her arms.

Money Not Stolen.

An examination to-day showed that Mr. Fellows was struck by two bullets. One entered his head near the right temple and the other struck him in the left shoulder.

The police went to work on the theory that he was attacked by robbers, but the discovery of Mrs. Fellows that her husband still carried the money he took from the store last night dispelled this theory and to-day the police are puzzled to know who the assailant can be. Mrs. Fellows says she knows of no enemy of her husband.

Mr. Fellows was fifty years old and had been in business here for many years. He was one of the best known business men in the South street district.

TWENTY-FIVE HURT BY RUNAWAY CAR

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Two persons were seriously injured to-day and twenty-three other men and women, passengers in a trolley car bound from St. George to Richmond, S. I., were more or less seriously injured when the car, getting beyond the control of the motormen, ran away on the steep hill on Weight street, running for three blocks before it was brought to a stop by colliding with a delivery wagon at Walter street, Stapleton.

WOMAN DEAD BY POISON AFTER ROW

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Mrs. Daisy von Marlow, the young wife of Clyde von Marlow, an art editor, died in the Robespierre apartments at No. 230 West Fiftieth street to-day after taking a quantity of poison. The woman's husband says she must have taken the poison by mistake. Von Marlow acknowledged that he had had a quarrel with his wife and had left her.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 23.—Charles H. Morss, former superintendent of schools at Medford, Mass., was elected superintendent of the Portland schools, receiving seven votes to six for Dr. Daniel H. Dole of this city.

TURKEY PRICE SOARS HIGHER THAN BIRDS

With prices soaring much higher than turkeys ever do on the wing, everybody is interested in Thanksgiving dinner prices. Old Mr. Lucullus, who was an ancient Roman and spent money on food and liquor as if he was John D. Rockefeller, and every other trust magnate combined, would find that the cost of plain ordinary viands in these times calculated to make even a millionaire gasp.

But for all that, Thanksgiving dinners are going to be more bounteous than ever, according to what marketmen say. The town of Boston is now one vast storehouse of good things to eat. They are selling at feast and famine prices, too.

But although good times have come again, or coming, food prices have not gone up much above the average of one year ago. Big crops are one reason for this. Turkeys will be about the same in cost as they have been since the fowl business got going this Fall. Apples will be a [illegible] bit higher. This is largely due to the demand in Europe for this staple American fruit. Vegetables have sagged in price to make the hearts of the hungry happy.

Vermont Turkeys High.

Vermont turkeys are a brand of birds which have climbed high in cost in the markets, however. This is because the demand for Green Mountain gobblers and their wives and chickens is beyond the supply. All over the United States the Vermont turkey has become the standard of quality. He is supposed to have the most palatable flavor of all and to be as meaty as a well ripened nut. The average price for Vermont turkeys is thirty-eight cents.

Western turkeys are selling from 28 to 32 for the first quality. The second grade are tagged 20 to 26 cents.

One of the Boston marketmen, who handles the most birds, said about the turkey situation: "There is no famine in turkeys. If you want something extra fine in that line I shall have to tax you from 38 to 40 cents. But there are good, wholesome birds from the West which put a real Thanksgiving dinner within everybody's means. I should say that the average price will be about 25 cents."

Vegetables Are Lower.

Geese are quoted at 18 to 22 cents. Ducks are not plenty and bring from 20 to 25 cents. Fowl is scarce, and is selling at from 18 to 28 cents. These prices will vary somewhat if the weather does not change.

Eggs are holding their own at from 35 to 60 cents.

Vegetables are lower this season. White celery is quoted from 12 cents to 20. Pumpkins bring 15 cent. Cauliflower 15 to 25 cents each, egg plant 15 to 25 cents, onions, carrots, beets and turnips 5 cents a pound, squash 3 cents a pound, sweet potatoes 10 pounds for a quarter.

Cranberries were never so cheap in years, and bring 8 to 10 cents a quart.

SKELETON FOUND IN SPENCER MARSH

SPENCER, Nov. 23.—The skeleton of a man was found in a marsh in the north part of Spencer.

It is the opinion of Medical Examiner Norwood that the skeleton had lain there for two years or more.

The only clew as to who the man might be was furnished by Harry S. Kingsley, who recalled that about two or three years ago a man named Samuel Johnson came from West Springfield to visit his brother-in-law, Edward Hoar. Johnson was last seen walking toward North Spencer, and there all trace of him was lost.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

LITTLE ESTHER HAS THREE EYES NOW

BURRVILLE, Ct., Nov. 23.—Esther, the one-year-old daughter of Leon Delibes, a trolley conductor living here, thought that the eyes of a toy cat she was playing with yesterday were candy, and after working one loose, which was attached with a pin, she swallowed both. A doctor was hastily called and to-day the baby is apparently as well as ever, although the eye and pin have not been recovered.

SEEKS MISSING HUSBAND.

WORCESTER, Nov. 23.—William Parker, whose home is at the corner of John and Pink streets, left there to make arrangements for the funeral of his child, but no trace of him has been found since leaving the house, and his wife has asked the police to search for him.

BRIDE-ELECT HANDS FARMER A GOLD BRICK

MANCHESTER, N. H., Nov. 23.—"Never again!" said Farmer James P. Jameson of Bow, in the police station here to-day. Farmer Jameson left his hens and hay and home to get married to his housekeeper, and instead got locked up because his bride-to-be left him waiting on Tremont Common.

"Never again!" said the farmer to the police captain, and he held his hand up, too.

It all happened because Farmer Jameson, who is sixty years young and wealthy, wanted to "get spliced," as he put it. He's a widower and says he's lonesome. Last year he advertised for a housekeeper. A chic French girl of twenty-two replied to the advertisement. She worked as housekeeper for three weeks. Farmer Jameson proposed. The French maid accepted, and after the couple went to Manchester and purchased the bride-to-be's expensive trousseau she disappeared.

Two weeks ago another pretty, chic French maid named Mabelle Gagnon, with large brown eyes and rosy complexion, answered another of Farmer Jameson's advertisements for housekeeper. He proposed last week. She accepted. Yesterday the couple came to Manchester. Farmer Jameson and his bride-to-be took out a marriage license at the City Hall. And then—

"Oh! 'Jim' we must buy my trousseau now," said Miss Gagnon, as she smiled her sweetest smile.

They visited all of the department stores and the bill ran up into the hundreds. Nothing was too good for the future Mrs. Jameson.

Just as the City Hall clock pealed four the couple were passing through Tremont Common.

"Wait here just a minute, implored the bride-to-be. "I want to run over to visit a dear friend."

Farmer James waited and waited, while he munched pop corn and peanuts. At 10 o'clock last night the policeman ordered Jameson to move on.

"No I won't, I'm waitin' for my wife," replied Farmer Jameson.

The policeman was lenient. He returned at 1 o'clock this morning. Jameson was still waiting. Then the policeman arrested Farmer Jameson and locked him up in a cell for safe keeping.

DEMAND A REGULAR WOOD ISLAND STOP

Demands that the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad make Wood Island a regular stop and extend its service there or else the Boston Elevated be allowed to extend its lines to that place were made at a hearing before the Railroad Commissioners at the State House to-day. Attorney Barnes of East Boston conducted the hearing for the petitioners, who were all residents of East Boston, and Representative Bates of that district spoke for them. He insisted that the popularity of the park warranted the Narrow Gauge in making it more than a flag stop. Among the petitioners who spoke were George Stanley Fiske and Mary J. Moran. Vice President Fenno appeared for the company. The board took the matter under advisement.

ANOTHER ROOFING CONCERN ACCEPTS

The largest roofing concern in Boston to-day accepted the new and increased wage scale of Sheet Metal Workers' Union No. 17, granting the men $3.75 a day from January 1 to May 1, an increase of 25 cents a day, and $4 a day beginning May 1. Twenty-four peaceful settlements have now been made with Boston firms by Business Agent John F. Kennedy of the union. With the settlement made to-day and the others almost assured, Mr. Kennedy feels confident that the strike which seemed imminent for January 1 will not take place, or if it does it will not be of any size.

TWO ALARMS FOR $400 ROXBURY FIRE

Fire in the basement and first floor of No. 384 Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury, to-day, caused a damage of $400. After the fire apparatus had left the house, Jacob Bloom, who lives on the first floor, went into his bedroom and opening a closet door, was greeted by more flames. He pulled in another alarm, and the same apparatus returned. The cause of both fires is unknown.

LASTERS STRIKE IN AUBURN, ME.

AUBURN, Me., Nov. 23.—Part of the crew of lasters at the shoe shop of the National Shoemakers are on strike. The men say they went out because three of their companions were discharged.

CHLOROFORM AND ROB MAN IN AMESBURY

AMESBURY, Nov. 23.—Amesbury is excited over a daring highway robbery in the principal street early to-day, in which Charles Billyas, a young employe of the Merrimac hat factory, was seized, chloroformed, his pockets emptied and his unconscious body hidden in a hedge.

Billyas was going to the factory unusually early. In front of the residence of E. A. Childs, a merchant, in Main street, two men asked him for a match. He complied, whereupon one of the two grabbed his arms from behind and the other, saturating a handkerchief with chloroform from a bottle he took from his pocket, covered Billyas's face.

The young mill hand struggled, but gradually became stupefied and lost his senses. Patrolman Joseph O'Neil found his senseless form under a hedge a short distance away. He had been robbed of $25.

Billyas was taken to police headquarters, where he revived.

UNCLE KETCHUM GETS RELIGION IN NECK

MONTICELLO, N. Y., Nov. 23.—Uncle James Ketchum, eighty-five years old, provided a theme for a sermon to-day at the Presbyterian Church. The Rev. A. J. Waugh found his inspiration in Uncle Ketchum's stiff neck, rendered so by falling off a load of hay. It was so stiff that Uncle Ketchum couldn't even turn his head. But he prayed and prayed. A few days afterward he went into his stable and a mule kicked him square on the chin. It cost Uncle Ketchum three teeth, but it cured the stiff neck. And that's how Uncle Ketchum got religion.

TINY STAR IS BOOKED FOR BARRYMORES

NEW YORK, Nov. 23. — Ethel Barrymore (Mrs. Russell Griswold Colt), is very soon to become a mother. It is said the interesting arrival is expected within a few weeks at the home of the young couple in Bellehaven, Conn., where Mrs. Colt has remained during the Summer and Fall.

Miss Barrymore's marriage on March 15 last at Hyde Park, Mass., to the son of the millionaire ex-president of the U. S. Rubber Company, followed a romantic courtship.

Miss Barrymore, whom report had engaged to a score of prominent men at home and abroad, always declared she would marry an American, but Mr. Colt had never been mentioned as a suitor until a few weeks before the marriage. Jack Barrymore announced that they had been married in Hyde Park, near Boston.

Miss Barrymore postponed arrangements for her stage appearance in the new play, "Mid Channel" until February. Her husband is a son of Col. Samuel Pomeroy Colt former president of the U. S. Rubber company.

John and Lionel Barrymore will be uncles of the new baby, and John Drew a great uncle.

SENDS FOLKS WORD OF HER MARRIAGE

Annie McGee, the daughter of William McGee of Boylston street, Jamaica Plain, it became known to-day, is the bride of Charles McGuire, a salesman of this city. The girl left home Sunday to visit a friend and yesterday sent word to her parents telling them of her marriage.

"RIGOLETTO" OPENS BRILLIANT THIRD WEEK OF GRAND OPERA

Outpouring on the Opening Night of the Season Alone Surpasses Brilliancy of the Audience.

By ARTHUR de GUICHARD.

The third week of the Boston Opera Company opened last night with the performance of "Rigoletto," by Verdi, with a notably strong cast.

At length a work by the grand old man of the modern Italian school of opera has been given us. We have already had the privilege of listening to the compositions of his pupils and disciples, such as "La Gioconda" (Ponchielli), "Cavalleria Rusticana" (Mascagni), "I Pagliacci" (Leoncavallo), and "La Boheme" (Pucini); but it was reserved until last evening for us to be introduced to the master of them all, Verdi, the ever verdant, always growing in form and in modernity of style right up to the day of his death.

"RIGOLETTO."

In Italian; an opera in four acts, by Verdi.

Gilda	Frances Alda
Maddalena	Elvira Leveroni
Countess Ceprano	Virginia Pierce
Giovanna	Mildred Rogers
Paggio	Jeska Swartz
The Duke of Mantova	Florencio Constantino
Rigoletto	George Baklanoff
Sparafucile	Giusto Nivette
Count Monterone	Giuseppe Perini
Marullo	Attilio Pulcini
Count Ceprano	George Dunstan
Borsa	Ernesto Giaconne
Musical Director	Arnaldo Conti
Regisseur General	Delfino Menotti

His life had been a long one of eighty-eight years, yet, far from reposing, his period of artistic development, as we now conceive it, and of fertility of creation, was when he had become a septuagenarian. Truly a most grand old man.

Full of Melody.

His earlier works, from "Oberto, Conti di S. Bonifacio" (1839) down to "Luisa Miller," show but little of the Verdi as he is now known, except for his wonderful fund of melody.

Melody bubbled and sparkled from him as limpid water from the purest never-failing spring. About the only operas remembered of that period are "I Lombardi" (1843) and "Ernani" (1844) and that only for the beauty and brilliance of a few arias. It took him all that time to break away from the stilted, frivolous and musically unsatisfying examples of Rossini, Bellini and Donizetti.

Then began a period of feverish activity in a new vein, and three operas were produced inside of two years, "Rigoletto," in March, 1851, at Venice; "Trovatore," in January, 1853, at Rome, and "Traviata," in March following, at Venice.

From these works dates the evolution of realism in opera—the closer, more emotional story rushing powerfully to its tragic close.

Orchestra Part Important.

The orchestra is treated as a more important factor in the work, instead of as an immaterial accompaniment, and is given its share of descriptive coloration. Some people have imagined they saw the influence of Wagner operating this change. It was not so. Indeed it may be positively affirmed that Wagner's innovations never had any shadow of an influence.

If the change in Verdi's style be due to anyone it might have been to the example of Meyerbeer, but it is very problematical. It is most likely only a coincidence that the two composers hit upon a new form of operatic expression at about the same time.

Its result was to endow the world with three operas that have remained to impress and charm the minds of music lovers, despite the attractions of other schools and other forms.

These three, "Rigoletto," "Trovatore" and "Traviata" owe their popularity to the well-knit tissue of their stories—the first two being particularly tense and graphic, and to their melodies and concerted pieces. Verdi's phenomenal fecundity of melody, singly and contrapuntally, never forsook him.

In "Rigoletto" Verdi gives us the first glimmering of what was to be the modern school of Italian music as we now know it.

There are still to be found some trivialities which would be better elsewhere, but the dramatic and musical unities are better observed than in any of its predecessors.

Defects Splendidly Redeemed.

Verdi had something new to say and he said it "right off," while it was hot within him. It took him just forty days from the moment he received the book of words to the day he wrote its "finis."

From that time to his death Verdi continued to produce greater and better works, never less in style, always something new to say, some new message and some new surprise even to those who thought they knew his capabilities and their limitations. So that his last works, "Otello" and "Falstaff," are also his greatest and best.

Is it too much to hope for their performance by the company of the Boston Opera House, which contains all the elements for interpretation of a high order?

In proof whereof, witness last night's performance of "Rigoletto." Naturally there were some defects, but they were so splendidly redeemed by the general excellence of the performance that they are only pointed out in the cause of truth,—also lest the company forget.

The house was filled in every corner by the biggest attendance yet, save that of the opening night. The popularity of "Rigoletto" is perennial. Was I not right to name Verdi the ever verdant?

Florencio Constantino was the Duke, the part which he has made peculiarly his own and he sang it with better voice and surer technic than ever before. Right from his first entrance in Act 1, the large audience was with him and insisted upon a repetition of the Questa o quella, in which the tenor gave the interpolated B flat with easy ringing quality.

Draws Line on Costume.

But the ever popular La donna e mobile was Constantino's triumph of the evening. He has never sung it better; with pure notes, caressing quality of tones and perfect management of voice—particularly in the admirable decrescendo on the G sharp of the word d'accento, and again later as he falls asleep the nuancing is without a flaw, for it was impossible to say where the voix mixte ended and the falsetto began.

But what of the Rigoletto and Mr. Baklanoff? Frankly, he is an admirable actor and a fine singer with a splendid baritone voice of great compass, of even timbre throughout, very sympathetic, thoroughly trained and possessing much temperament.

I did not care very much for his dress and his body make-up, being accustomed to other colors, and to a hunchback. Mr. Baklanoff gave the distorted legs and the twisted walk, but he finally discarded the walk.

Nevertheless, his impersonation was so full of fervor and gripping poignancy that I would forgive him the most eccentric costume for the artist's remarkable talent. In the sincerity of his comedy he gave a very touching picture of the jester's grief.

Mme. Alda Successful.

Mme. Frances Alda was completely successful as Gilda. She looked to the life the pretty little maiden who has never been outside her convent and her home. Mme. Alda possesses a coloratura voice, somewhat stronger than the majority of light sopranos, with an excellent high register, but her medium notes, which are much weaker, appeared to me to be rather forced, and thus the quality suffered.

Her execution was impeccable and the pianissimo trill at the end of Caro nome was perfection.

At the end of Act 2 Mme. Alda was recalled to receive a regular garden of flowers, among them a superb basket of chrysanthemums.

M. Giusto Nivette was the Sparafucile. His remarkable bass voice, pure style and reposeful acting lent authority to the scenes in which he appeared and completed an excellent quartet of artists.

Miss Elvira Leveroni sang the solo music of Maddalena correctly, but when it came to the celebrated quartet Bella figlia her part was wanting in accuracy.

Mr. Giuseppe Perini made a stately Count Monterone and sang the music with feeling and good resonant voice.

Handsomely Mounted.

The minor parts were filled capably by Mildred Rogers, Virginia Pierce, Attilio Pulcini, George Dunstan and Ernesto Giaccone.

The opera was very handsomely mounted. The renaissance hall in Act 1, with its carving and flamboyant coloring, made a brilliant and faithful picture of the period. But the storm in the last act might have been more effective had the rain appeared to come from all the sky instead of from only one half of it, with a strong line of demarcation to show where there was none.

The chorus rendered some very good assistance. The pianissimo passages were well taken and the singing showed much more precision than on previous occasions.

The orchestra would have been much better had it been more subdued, for the principals were frequently almost inaudible from too much accompaniment. Mr. Conti was a capable leader, with that exception.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

MARY GARDEN FINDS REAL CHILD WONDER

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23.—Willette Wilbourne, twelve years old, sang for Miss Mary Garden to-day. The girl had scarcely finished her first selection, the aria from the "Carnival of Venice," when Miss Garden rushed to the piano, and, taking a diamond bestudded bracelet from her wrist, clasped it about the child's arm to seal their friendship. "She is marvelous—wonderful," declared Miss Garden afterward.

SOCIETY SHINES IN GEMS AND GOWNS

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Again last night throngs of gayly gowned fashionables flocked to the opera. It was to be sure, the beginning of the third week but that fact was evident neither in the enthusiasm nor the gorgeousness and newness of the gowns.

It was a regular "first night" all over again, the women were radiant, the gowns lovely and the jewels dazzling.

The opera is surely coming to be the rallying grounds for the display of beauty and its adornment. It is the arena of fashion for women and the rendezvous for the music loving men of the smartest set.

Night after night they come, the men as well as the women, night after night they arrive late and night after night greet their friends, parade about the foyer between the acts, take in the gowns of the passing show on Peacock parade and either entertain or are entertained at supper afterwards.

Gowns More Gorgeous.

One might think that such a program would grow monotonous, and confidently I look each night for a sign of flagging enthusiasm or a sameness in the gowns, but as yet I have seen neither.

Last night the enthusiasm was greater than ever and the gowns more gorgeous. The Boston women are surely refuting the charge that they know naught of the art of gowning and as if to show the critics what they really can do, it seems that they appear each night in a new creation lovelier than the last.

How long they will keep up this pace is another question but—they have proved that they have the gowns as well as that they know how to wear them.

Even the modistes who have their high-minded notions on the latest in choicest confections are coming to consider the opera a perfect fashion barometer by which they may learn the trend of the Parisienne's taste.

"Who would ever have thought they could dress like this," a winsome out-of-town matron whispered to me last night. And still they gaze and still the wonder grows as to how she manages to do it.

All Eyes on Mrs. Slater.

The most gorgeous creation of all last night and one attracting general attention because of its beauty of line as well as its priceless value was that worn by Mrs. Horatio Nelson Slater. Everywhere she went thousands of eyes followed her and ohs! and ahs! were heard on all sides as she paraded about the lower corridor.

The foundation was of white satin and the drape a heavy white net interwoven with myriads of torquois and pearls, while gold threads formed a pretty flower design. It was truly a marvelously wrought creation. A gown of jewels—imagine. Her necklace was of torquois and diamonds.

With Mrs. Slater was her pretty debutante daughter, Esther, whose pink silk frock became her vastly and was made on the simplest lines.

Two notably gowned women, both of the same height and the same distinguished bearing were Mrs. Bryce Allan and Mrs. Guy Norman who both came late and made a mild stirr when discovered.

Mrs. Norman was a guest in the Allan box and wore a Grecian gown of gold-embroidered black chiffon over black satin, a diamond tiara and diamond necklace. Mrs. Allan was strikingly beautiful in violet satin and diamonds.

Mrs. Fairchild Bright Beauty.

Mrs. Edward Brandegee was, as always, an interesting figure and looked especially well in her Parisian gown of gray satin with drape of gray net.

Dominating it all, however, as the bright particular beauty of the social scene was Mrs. John C. Fairchild, whose masses of dark hair brought simply back and knotted in Grecian effect are in such striking contrast to her clear pink and white complexion. She arrived rather early and waited for Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears and her party as she was a guest in the Sears box.

She wore a clinging gown of salmon-colored satin, the bodice draped in surplus effect with cloth of silver, which set to perfection her exquisite coloring. As she waited for her hostess she walked about in the lower corridor and was kept busy bowing and smiling to her numerous friends as they entered.

But finally Mrs. Sears and her daughter arrived with all sorts of abject apologies for having kept her waiting and fairly carried her off with them to their box. Mrs. Sears wore black satin with a dog collar of pearls while Miss Helen Sears was looking more attractive than ever in her clinging gown of white chiffon over white satin, trimmed with a crystal drape on the bodice.

Miss Sally Thayer, the stately brunette daughter of the Nathaniel Thayers, was among the most beautifully gowned of the younger girls. Always a striking figure she was more attractive than ever in a handsomely modelled gown of torquois blue satin with a drape of chiffon of the same shade.

Pearls were her only jewels. With her as she entered was that handsome young matron, Mrs. Eugene Thayer, and dainty, slender Mrs. John L. Bremer (Mary Bigelow), Mrs. Thayer in white lace and Mrs. Bremer in white satin.

Mrs. Jordan Entertained.

Pretty Priscilla Stackpole, her dark hair parted on the side and wearing a gown of white satin and tulle, was one of the very few engaged girls present.

Miss Joan Bird, the pretty fiancee of Louis Agassiz Shaw, was there however, and entertained a party of young people in her father's box. Among them were Mr. Shaw and Miss Katherine Warren. As the two girls sat together in the box Miss Bird's brunette coloring and black gown made just the proper foil for the fair-haired Katherine in her gown of white chiffon trimmed with bands of white pompadour satin.

Mrs. Eben D. Jordan was lovely in crystal chiffon over pale blue satin and entertained a number of friends in her box.

A most original dress, in cut as well as in color, was that worn by Mrs. Henry D. Tudor. It was violet irridescent spangled chiffon, over velvet satin with girdle and sash of velvet pompadour satin.

Miss Alice Parker wore black chiffon over pale blue which set off her Litian coloring most becomingly.

A stunning figure in black chiffon was Mrs. William P. Gray. Miss Grace Edwards was in gray satin and pearls; Miss Elizabeth Brooks in pink chiffon; Mrs. H. Hinckley in white chiffon embroidered in gold; Mrs. Warren Weeks in black brocaded satin; Mrs. Galen Stone in pink panne velvet and Mrs. William Sheafe in black satin, draped with tulle.

Miss Burnham in Black.

One of the handsomest of the younger girls, all in black, was Miss Nina Burnham, whose gown was of black satin and tulle. In her dark hair was a wreath of frosted laurel leaves.

Her opera cloak was quite the most striking of any, being one built on the lines of the Javanese kimona, and decorated with hand painted vari colored chrysanthemums.

Mrs. H. H. Fay, one of the most distinguished matrons there, was in black tulle and had with her her pretty daughter, Mary, who still carried her broken arm in a sling. Her gown was of blue satin.

Notable among the all-black figures were Mrs. William Councilman in black satin draped with jetted chiffon; Miss Evelyn Sears in black chiffon; Miss M. B. Lothrop in black satin; Mrs. Benjamine Pitman in black satin with diamonds on the bodice, and Miss Helen Homans in black chiffon embroidered in silver.

Quite the most picturesque figure in the assemblage was that daintiest of all dainty debutantes, Beatrice Ayer, who has just made her initial bow to our smart world, but still retains all the charm and sweetness of the school girl.

Her gown was a simply fashioned creation of white satin trimmed with pearls, while one of those bewitching little Juliet caps topped her simply done coiffure.

Mrs. Wyman Among Late Arrivals.

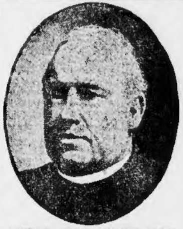
Mrs. Curtis Guild, Jr., as radiantly lovely as ever, was one of the very late arrivals. Her gown was of black satin with touches of pale blue satin on the bodice.

Mrs. Herbert Lyman, was one of the handsomest of the younger matrons arriving late and attracted much admiring attention in her gown of old rose satin trimmed with pearls.

Mrs. George Mumford was in pompadour satin; Mrs. E. M. Varney in black lace; Mrs. George B. Shattuck in black satin and diamonds and Mrs. William B. Rogers in black satin and pearls.

Mrs. Oliver Ames, in pink satin, veiled in white chiffon; Mrs. Henry Hunnewell, in black and white chiffon, and a wonderful diamond necklace; Mrs. Joseph Gardner Bradley, in dark blue satin and gold slippers, and Mrs. Boylston Beal, charming in white lace over pink satin, were a few of the matrons coming in for special attention.

Mrs. George Converse, in a gown of black chiffon over white satin and a cluster of forget-me-nots in her blonde hair, was a notable figure parading about the foyer during intermission.



WHERE THE DANGER LIES

How Best to Avoid It.—Facts Everybody Ought to Know.

The great danger in colds at this season of the year is that they lead to chronic throat and lung troubles and consumption.

The moment you begin to take patent medicines and so-called cough cures, the majority of which depend entirely on nerve-deadening drugs for their effect, you weaken the body.

That takes away the fighting power necessary to ward off disease, and the grip and pneumonia germs develop, and because the body is weakened is why pneumonia is so often fatal.

Father John's Medicine is not a patent medicine, and does not contain alcohol or dangerous drugs. It cures throat and lung troubles, coughs and colds. Get a bottle today.

How to Stop Baldness.

Woods Hutchinson, M. D., widely known as a writer of authority, says in the Cosmopolitan Magazine for February, 1909: "The main hope of stopping the advance of baldness lies in the direction of improving the general health and vigor, while at the same time keeping the scalp and the hair in a clean, antiseptic, well-ventilated condition. Avoid using too strong soaps, strong alkalis, such as ammonia and soda, and too hot water, as all of these take out too much of the natural lubricant, or oil, of the hair, and leave it dry and harsh." Birt's Head Wash, the new scientific preparation, is recommended as perfectly safe for cleansing the hair and scalp. It is mild and antiseptic, made of Refined Soap, Cochin Cocoanut Oil, Glycerine, White of Eggs and Salicylic Acid. This is a formula that comes well within Dr. Hutchinson's recommendation, as it contains no free alkali or ammonia, and it puts the scalp and hair in a vigorous, healthful condition.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with urine and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling usually indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys. Too frequent desire to urinate, scanty supply, pain or dull ache in the back, should also convince you that the kidneys or bladder are out of order.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, fulfils almost every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold urine, and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate.

The mild, pleasant and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful results in the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, and a book that tells all about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing be sure to mention that you read this generous offer in the Boston Daily American. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

DELMONT WINS
DECISION OVER
FREDDIE O'BRIEN

CALIFORNIA SURE TO GET JEFFRIES-JOHNSON BOUT

By TAD.

One week from Wednesday bids for the big fight will be opened and considered at the Hotel Albany in New York, and the end of the advertising bidders will be a certainty.

There have been more phony bids for this go than for any bout ever held before. Everyone from South America to Alaska put in. Of course it was an easy way to get an ad, a cheap way and a fine boost for the bidder in his home town.

Right now the bidding has settled down to one place, and that is California. It will be between Jim Croffroth and the Frisco bidders.

The rumors around still hint that Gleason is in with Jeffries and Berger, and will send the bids up for them, or get the fight and declare Jeff in.

Graney in With Pols.

There is still another in Eddie Graney, who will be here in behalf of Frisco bidders. Eddie is in high with the politicians out there, and it is thought that if he can collar the big show that they will raise the limit on fights from twenty to forty-five rounds out there.

There will be some loud talking and some great promises made a week from Wednesday. Just now it's even money betting that California lands the match, as the other towns are out of consideration altogether.

Joe Humphreys, who had a bid in for some Mexican people, has quit entirely. "They were willing to have me offer $100,000," said Joe, "and they were to own the moving pictures. I thought the thing over for a week or so and told them the folly of the offer. In the first place, the pictures might prove a failure, as the McGovern-Palmer things did. Why, it cost $5,000 to get that fight photographed, and it went half a round. They blew the roll and never made a cent. In the next place, where are the people coming from to get this big purse? Why, right in the best days of fighting here in New York the best purse ever drawn was $66,000.

Won't Throw Money Away.

"How do they ever expect to draw that in a one-horse town? Take it from me, these fellows are liable to bid too high on a fight like that. People haven't got the money to throw away on a fight when they can see pictures for $1.00 a throw. Why, thirty-six shows blew up on the road last week. Does that sound good for the big prices they are going to ask?

"I'm not crazy enough to get in bad with another man's money. If there was a chance to make a bid I'd bid, but not with any $75,000 or $100,000 purse. Good night; let George do it."

* * *

"Did you ever see so many guys in your life as have sprung up lately?" continued the old sport. "Why, every day you hear of some fellow who wants to bet $20,000 even that Jeff wins. Why shouldn't he? Why, it's the biggest cinch in the world to make a bet like that. Jeff will be favorite when they fight, and the fellow with even money can lay it off at odds of 10 to 7, or 6, and clean up a nice little roll. They're crazy like a lot of foxes, those even money betters."

* * *

Packey McFarland threatens to invade the enemy's camp soon after the holidays. He has a bum beezer as a result of the go with Johnny Thompson, but as soon as he has an operation performed on same and is breathing right again Mr. F. Welch will hear a knock at his door which means come out and mingle.

McFarland wants the lightweight title which England bestowed upon Mr Welch, and he thinks that he can get it. He met Welch twice, winning one and drawing in the other.

In Milwaukee Packey was given a decision over Welch in a ten-round go, but later when the pair met at Los Angeles in a twenty-five-round fight Referee Jeffries declared the thing a draw.

* * *

Steve Ketchel is becoming as fickle as the wind. He doesn't know this minute what he's going to do the next. Last week he stated that he was going on a tour of the world; the day after we heard that he was to fight Jim Flynn in Los Angeles. Yesterday he had a new manager and to-day we learn that he isn't going to do a thing except go on the stage and imitate Jeffries and Johnson in a championship go.

Everyone of our champs are on the stage now—Nelson, Ketchel, Johnson and Jeffries. I love my ring, but oh you, calcium!

* * *

English papers can't find words to describe the cleverness of Freddie Welch. Since his fight with Summers they have all been throwing bouquets, and one admits that there is no one word which will describe the whirlwind Welshman. They will admit, however, that Frederick is a bit shy on the slam thing, but outside of that can't think of a man who can beat him. As to a forty-five round affair with Nelson they are guessing some. They say it may be a bit too long, but that old Dane wants the Marathon route every time he starts and they have to come to him.

BIDS FOR FIGHT MAY BE PART OF JEFF'S SHOW

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The opening bids of the Johnson-Jeffries fight now promises to be a second cousin to a circus. According to Jeff's agents, the bidding will take place at Madison Square Garden on Wednesday evening, December 1, on which occasion Jeff will appear with his all-star athletic combination.

On learning that stakeholder Bob Murphy, of the Albany hotel, is worried over the prospect of handling a big crowd when the bids are opened, Jeff's business assistants, backed by Berger and James Jay himself, thought it would add to the gate to have the bidding as a side show to the carnival in which Jeffries, Gotch and Berger will appear.

The advance agent of the show claims that Johnson was asked about the suggestion and has wired his consent, with an offer to insert his sketch, "An Afternoon in a Training Camp," in Jeff's carnival. The notice of this change in the original plans doesn't say that there will be a debate by educated monkeys or tight rope walking by a troupe of trained elephants, but there is time to incorporate these features.

"To the left people we have the strange and wonderful beasts of prey. Do not approach too close to the cages, for all have been fed to-day except the clowns.

"Get your hot peanuts here.

"Pink lemonade and dogs this way.

"The great leap for life is about to take place in the main arena, good people.

"Jerry, turn the crank."

* * *

Stanley Ketchel has thrown up the Flynn match at Los Angeles. Just what happened isn't known, but it was occasioned perhaps by the departure of Tom Carey for New York. The offer of $5,000 for his end looked a little generous, too. Ketchel will start east on a little fighting campaign, and intends to wind up in Europe. He hasn't selected a manager as yet.

JIM BARRY TO BOX CALLOWAY AT ARMORY A. A.

Jim Barry, the Chicago heavyweight, will be in his element to-night when he faces Ralph Calloway, the California colored slugger at the Armory A. A. as Jim likes nothing better than to hand a good licking to fighters of the Jack Johnson hue. He has tried often enough to spoil Sam Langford's career, but was barking the wrong tree trying to get Ho Ho's goat and he leaves the Boston tar baby alone now.

In Calloway, Barry is meeting another hard nut, but with his own extra weight and hitting power he figures he ought to win by a knockout inside the limit, that is, if the coast man does not happen to slip over one of his haymakers first.

As Langford has trained Calloway, who is about the quickest man of his weight seen around here, Barry is in for trouble as Sam had given his man all the inside tips on how to bother the erratic Chicago boxer.

With both men cutting loose there will be some fine hammering with the fists as both know and are only too willing to show the steam behind their wallops.

The semifinal between Limerick and Miers should be a warm affair and the opening bout between McDougall and Maguire ought to satisfy everyone.

SUTTON TAKES FIRST MATCH

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—In the opening game of the international series for the professional 18.2 balk line billiard championship of the world in the Madison Square Concert Hall George Sutton defeated Calvin Demarest of Chicago by a score of 500 to 302. Sutton had high runs of 134, 55, 51 and an average of 17 7-29. Demarest's high runs were 75, 52, 34, and he averaged 10 22-28.

ABE ATTELL PULLS DOWN SOFT MONEY

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 23.—Abe Attell, the featherweight champion, has something soft handed to him when he got the decision over Jimmy Moran of Brooklyn in their eight-round bout at the Phoenix Club.

Moran was outclassed in every round, but was game and apparently able to continue for several rounds at the finish. The betting was ten to seven that Moran would not be on his feet at the end.

On account of considerable betting and the fact that Attell did not extend himself until the last three rounds, charges were made after the bout that Moran was treated leniently by the featherweight champion. There were no clean knockdowns, and the only damage was a bloody nose and a partly closed eye by Moran as a result of frequent jabs by Attell.

In the sixth round Moran slipped and fell to the mat, but was up before the count started. Attell tried for a knockout in the seventh, but fell from the force of his own wild swings. One of the largest houses in the history of local bouts saw the sport. Hock Bones, an undefeated southern welterweight, knocked out Mint Lee in two rounds in the preliminary.

RACE TRACK LEASED FOR MATINEE MEETS

FALL RIVER, Nov. 23.—John H. O'Neil of this city, has purchased the lease and all the personal property of the Shawmut Farm in New Bedford. This includes Evergreen Trotting Park. Fred Isabel was the lessee of the farm and the personal property included hay, wagons, lumber, etc. Mr. O'Neil has placed his brother-in-law, H. A. Franklin, in charge of the farm and will winter horses there.

Among other things which induced Mr. O'Neil to get the lease was to insure a place for the New Bedford Driving Club to have its races, Mr. O'Neil being vice-president of the club.

PITCHER McCARTHY WEDS.

WORCESTER, Nov. 23.—John P. McCarthy, formerly a pitcher for the Boston National League team, and Miss Claire Vaughan Stevens, a governess, both giving their residences as Jersey City, procured a marriage license here and went to the office of Fred W. Cronin, a justice of the peace, and were married.

JEFF HAS AN AWFUL DREAM

SPRINGFIELD, O., Nov. 23.—Jim Jeffries will knock out Jack Johnson in the fourth round of their mill if dreams are made of real stuff. Jeffries confided here to-day while visiting his parents, who are also visiting here, that he dreamed twice of the coming mill, and each dream found him winning by the knockout route in the fourth round.

Just after the articles were signed Jim demanded he had won by a knockout in the fourth, he told Sam Berger, his manager. In Akron, Saturday night, Jeffries again dreamed of the fight, with the same result. It is a long swing that is to put out Johnson, according to the dream stuff.

BASEBALL NEWS NOTES

That Pedoss who held the Tigers down to a no-hit game at Havana is said to be a wonderful twirler. Only his color keeps him out of the big leagues.

* * *

While it has several times been reported that Fred Tenney's legs had gone so much to the bad that he would not be able to play again, McGraw seems to think he is still good and has him slated for his old job next year.

* * *

It was said that Tenney would hold down the scouting job for the Giants; but now that the Pirates seem to want him, it's easy guessing that he is still good.

* * *

Fred Clarke announced that he would like to get Tenney to take Abstein's place. Abstein has been unlucky at important times, and some of his blunders have been particularly costly. When the turn comes in his luck he will be a crackerjack.

* * *

Jim Hart's announcement that he had never been a candidate for the presidency of the National League makes Cupid Murphy look a grade or two more foolish. What was Murphy boosting?

* * *

However, Murphy keeps in the limelight. He says he is making arrangements for the Cubs to do all their traveling in private cars hereafter. That is during the Spring training trip. This will save a lot of hotel bills.

* * *

Charley Comiskey of the White Sox is having his annual cruise in the White Sox on the river La Salle, Ill. He doesn't even think of baseball.

* * *

Three-finger Brown is shooting quail at Anna, Ill. Brown puts the pellets over with a gun as successfully as he does the ball when facing the Giants.

* * *

Although they have been threatened with arrest the Tigers in Cuba report that they are having a good time and the trip will be a success financially.

* * *

Jimenez, the Cuban promoter, who is running the Detroits' exhibitions in Cuba, is trying to get Ty Cobb to journey there and show himself.

* * *

The Cleveland team is to be split for the Spring work. By barnstorming both teams the management hopes to pick up some easy coin.

* * *

Both Nap teams will take on games with any of the big league clubs in the South that wish to play. Several games have already been booked.

* * *

Manager Chance's Cubs will be one of the teams to meet the Clevelands, the games taking place in New Orleans.

* * *

The White Sox will go to the Coast for practice and plan taking in Portland, Seattle and other Northwestern towns.

* * *

Paul Cobb, a brother of Tyrus, is wanted by San Antonio. He was once with the St. Louis Browns, but was let out without a trial.

* * *

Manager McAleer of the Washingtons has slated Jiggs Donohue, Jack Slatters and Speed Kelley for the shift to the minors.

* * *

George Browne, Germany Schaefer and George Withecup have been ordered to take in the baths at Hot Springs in advance of their teammates, so that they will have a chance to get fit. These men are "late" players.

* * *

Germany Schaefer has a bum prop that he fears may go back on him at any moment.

FRANK SLAVIN WANTS TO FIGHT

A challenge has been issued by Frank Slavin, the veteran heavyweight, who is now in Australia, to fight Charley Mitchell, John L. Sullivan, Jake Kilrain or Joe Choynski in one night. He agrees to stop all of the fighters named in ten rounds for a guarantee of $10,000 or if he fails to forfeit that amount to his opponents.

Here's a chance for some of those fly by night clubs that are looking for some big attractions in the fight line to bring some dead ones to light again.

BOXING NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Bob Fitzsimmons has been signed to box Bill Lang in Sydney. They meet December 27. Looks like a cinch for Ruby Robert, although he is more than one hundred years old. Boshter Bill Squires will be next.

* * *

Tommy Murphy wants action and wants it as soon as he can get it. Murphy is willing to make a match with any 133-pounder in the game, and will fight anywhere from six to forty-five rounds.

* * *

Murphy has been offered a fight at Memphis, and will take it as soon as he hears who his opponent is. Even Jim Jeffries can come in, provided he is able to make the lightweight limit. This means that no one in the game is barred.

* * *

Young Loughrey thinks that he is back in fighting form and wants a crack at Young Erne or Johnny Willets.

* * *

Young Pierce is on his way to England, where he hopes to beat Digger Stanley.

* * *

Battling Nelson did not referee the Keyes-Baldwin scrap, but he was at the ringside and when the battle was over announced that he did not think either man had much of a chance to beat him.

* * *

The latest bid for the Jeffries-Johnson fight is $1,500,000. The man who made the offer was captured by telephone. He couldn't remember his name or where he came from.

* * *

Dopesmiths figure that Jeffries will be a 2 to 1 favorite over Johnson if they ever do enter the ring.

DORCHESTER RIVALS MEET ON GRIDIRON

On Thanksgiving afternoon the Catholic Club of Dorchester and the Dorchester Athletic Association will meet on the Dunbar Avenue Grounds, Dorchester, for their annual football game. The game between the two teams is expected to be a hard fought contest, both teams being composed of former high school and college players. "Brick" Carey, "Artie" Ross, Bill Caldwell and Jack Wallace, formerly of Dorchester High, will make a strong showing for the D. A. A., while Captain Steffens, De Coen, Allen and Cullen, all former high school stars, will line up for the Catholic Club. The game will start at 3 o'clock.

MIKE DONLIN OUT OF BASEBALL FOR GOOD

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—Mike Donlin, former right fielder of the New York Giants, who remained out of the game last year, following the refusal of Muggsy McGraw to meet his salary demands, declared that he was out of the game for good. The former Giant declared that he had signed a theatrical contract for three years and followed this up with the declaration that he refused the highest salary ever offered to a baseball manager. Mike declared that Felix Isman of Philadelphia had offered him $30,000 to manage the Phillies next year, but he had declined the offer.

DOLE LEAVES DARTMOUTH.

CONCORD, Nov. 23.—William C. Dole, trainer of the Dartmouth College athletic team, announced that he had tendered his resignation, because of differences with the athletic council.

WILLUS BRITT DIED BANKRUPT

When Willus Britt died in California he left his affairs in a tangled state. Notwithstanding the fact that his efforts as a manager, with both Battling Nelson and Stanley Ketchel as stars of his stable, after his own brother, Jimmy Britt, has deserted the standard, netted him large sums of money, the little chap with the big cigar, left practically nothing to his wife and baby.

Automobiles were none too swift to move him from point to point, and he spent many dollars sending long letters by wire. During the year 1908, Britt cleared over $24,000 by his own admission.

After Britt's death it was found that he had a deposit of $2,000 in a San Francisco bank. Ketchel said the money belonged to him, and Mrs. Britt agreed that the boxer was right in the contention, but the former manager's creditors are making a legal battle for the $2,000.

Battling Nelson holds one note for $1,000 borrowed money, and a man named Clark has a similar paper for a like amount, in addition to other smaller creditors.

Meanwhile there is a movement on foot to hold a benefit for the wife and child of the whole-hearted but purse-foolish little Napoleon of the ring.

CASEY RATED IN SPAULDING'S

"Jimmy Casey, former big leaguer and now manager and infielder on the Montreal team, is in business in Detroit. Jimmy is running a supply house of some proportions, and is getting away with "pin" money.

As a manufacturer Mr. Casey telegraphed an order to an eastern firm a few days ago. He wanted a lot of material, wanted it in a hurry, and was willing to pay the company's figures, something which called for a total of several hundred dollars.

About four hours after Jimmy sent his telegram he received this message from the company:

"We can't find you in Dun and Bradstreet. Can't fill your order."

Casey thought a moment, then wired back this advice:

"Look in Spalding's Guide. You'll find me there. You got hold of the wrong book."

TO CAPTAIN HOLY CROSS.

WORCESTER, Nov. 23.—John Lawler of Bellows Falls, Vt., was elected captain of the Holy Cross football team. He has played end for three years, and is considered one of the best Holy Cross has ever had. He had his prep school training in the Bellows Falls High School, where he played his favorite position for three years. He is a member of the sophomore class.

Trainer Birney's New Job.

B. T. Birney, who raced Prince Alert (1:59½) some years ago around this vicinity, and that won a long-drawn-out race at Lexington with Flying Jim (2:06¼), will try his hand at getting the "gray ghost" Whitelock to the races next season. He has also signed with J. L. Dodge of Orangeburg, N. Y.

Noted Stallion Dead.

Dictator Wilkes, the son of Red Wilkes and Nancy Lee (dam of Nancy Hanks, 2:04, etc.), died in Missouri a short time since. He was twenty-five years old, and was represented by twelve standard performers, the fastest being Aunt Jerusha, 2:08½. Two of his sons are sires while six daughters are producers.

Results of Boxing Bouts

SALEM, Nov. 23.—At the Young Men's A. A., before a large crowd, Max Baker of Boston demonstrated that he was Jimmie Hanlon's master in every one of the eight rounds they boxed, and more. In the last round Baker floored Hanlon with a right hook.

In the semi-final Young Quinlan of Danvers won from Eddie Burns of Revere in six rounds. In the preliminaries Young Fredericks of Boston beat Young Gray of Boston in the second round, and Young Kelley of Lynn knocked out Young Daley of Everett in the first round.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, Eng., Nov. 23.—Bartley Connelly, the Portland (Me.) middleweight, knocked out Jim Maher of Philadelphia in seventeen rounds.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23.—Yankee Swartz had the better of Kid Beebe in the windup of the New Philadelphia A. C. The bout was full of action in every round, both boys being willing to mix matters. Beebe was hissed on two occasions for his foul tactics, while Swartz boxed fairly.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23.—Jack Talmer got a case of cold feet in the windup against Charley Stevenson at the West End Athletic Club, and before the spectators had a chance to enjoy six minutes of boxing threw up the sponge. Last week Stevenson made short work of Talmer by putting him out in the third round, but the latter declared that it was an accident and he was given another chance. He failed.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 23.—Patsy Brannigan of Pittsburg demonstrated that for six rounds or a short go he can at least keep Johnny Coulon busy, if he doesn't shade him. Patsy seemed to be raining blows from all points of the compass at once, but many of his thumps lacked steam and went to the back of Coulon's head. Coulon gamely took all that was given him and drove in some savage returns.

DELMONT IS WINNER OVER FRED O'BRIEN

That Albert Delmont, the little North End featherweight, is the master of Freddie O'Brien of Chelsea, was evident when the former scored his second decision over his foe, this time at the National A. A. C., in twelve rounds.

For a lad who lacks the same reputation in the ring and the same amount of experience, O'Brien certainly made the little Italian travel as he never has before. O'Brien's friends, who filled most of the house, thought he earned a draw by doing some aggressive work in the latter rounds, but he was too late in getting together.

For fast work with the mitts the bout was sensational as both boys showed all that was in them in the way of ring speed and there was swift action from the tap of the first bell.

Delmont started out to carry the fighting to his Chelsea foe and kept him busy in the early rounds blocking his leads.

Encouraged by the fans to get after Delmont in the second half of the route O'Brien opened up and used a right chop to the head that bothered Delmont a lot, and O'Brien looked good by his infighting, but he had nothing equal to the clean driving lefts of the winner, who peppered shots all over O'Brien's face and kept him blinking.

The final three rounds were of a lively order as O'Brien was making a grand rally to even up matters and Delmont was not backward in keeping the pace hot. Both boys were strong at the last bell in spite of fighting all over the canvas in the deciding session, O'Brien especially doing execution in handing out body punishment.

McNamara, a South Boston amateur made his first professional appearance and went to a draw with Joe Nelson of Lawrence. Nelson had strength and Mac possessed more cleverness which saved him from being knocked out.

Belfield Walcott took his brother Chester's place against Jimmy Lyons, as the younger member of the Walcott family thought his man too heavy for him. Belfield had to work some to get a draw.

Peck LeFavor scored a win in one round over Morris Rosenberg, an old timer who was in no trim and substituted for Peter Fifield of Pawtucket, the latter missing his train and failing to appear.

FREAK BIDS IN FOR THE JEFF FIGHT

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Two offers for the Jeffries-Johnson fight which "Bob" Murphy, stakeholder, has received were the most astounding that the preliminary skirmish for the battle has yet produced. A telegram from "Fred" Mace, dated Chicago, declared that four millionaires were prepared to offer a purse of $100,000 for a fight in California in April. According to the message, the promoters plan to charge 500 friends $200 each. Upon acceptance of the offer a certified check for $10,000 will be forwarded.

As secretary of the Commercial Club in that place, V. V. Bowers telegraphed from Richfield, Idaho, that "a town one year old offers $155,000 for a fight on February 22."

There were no collect charges on the messages, so Mr. Murphy smilingly placed them among other huge offers which he is preparing to present when the fighters meet next week to open bids.

"The real bidders do not seem to have begun their work," said the stakeholder. "When the California promoters get in action on Tuesday of next week we will probably see the other offers stowed away."

Perhaps the easiest way to discern interest in a big sporting event of any kind is to watch the betting. An overwhelming favorite kills all enthusiasm and disturbs the promoter's dreams; an even money proposition means heaps of talk, plenty of wagers and consequently a keen interest all around.

The Jeffries-Johnson battle, with its black against white side interest, is still over seven months away. But the men who fancy the negro, fancy him so strongly that they are willing to give a shade the best of the odds and make their wagers now in order to beat the price.

Jeffries's adherents feel the same way about the big battle and are ready to jump in the opening quotations in order to sell their commissions to the highest possible bidder.

Billy Roche, who has spent the greater part of his life managing and training boxers and refereeing big bouts, has just returned to New York after a swing through the Middle West. Roche brought with him a $5,000 commission from Jim Butler, theatrical manager, of St. Louis and Kansas City, to place on Jeff at anything that looked like even money.

"Shows that he thinks Jeff will be a heavy favorite at post time," commented a listener.

"Yes, and it shows he thinks the big fellow a sure winner," answered Roche, dryly.

STRAIGHT DOPE
FOR SPORT FANS

I KNEW IT WOULD HAPPEN. Already there are a hundred Yale-Harvard rows as to who did this and who did that and why they did it and why they didn't do it in the Yale-Harvard game. Some of the Harvard men are kicking because the papers said Fish interfered with O'Flaherty and others are kicking because the papers didn't roast O'Flaherty. They are writing to me caustic letters about it, but I'm going to be Mr. Wise and keep out of the Fish-O'Flaherty controversy. For my own part, I think both men could have been taken out of the game to Harvard's advantage. O'Flaherty was plainly dazed at times, and his fumbles were costly. Fish was so crippled he couldn't reach his hands above his head to get a punt, and looked helplessly around when one went over him. Only luck let Harvard, instead of Yale, get the kick, and luck prevented a Yale touchdown. And yet they were expecting Fish to get the Harvard forward passes and onside kicks. Also they are blaming Fish for most of Harvard's penalties. So I'll put the faults up to the Harvard generals, and I'm willing to let them settle the Fish-O'Flaherty controversy.

THERE SHOULD BE A CROWDED house at the Armory Club to-night, for the show is without doubt the best one offered this Winter by the organization. It will be a treat to see Young Limerick and Henry Myers mix it up again, and if they only duplicate their last bout most of the members won't care if they see anything else. In the star event of the evening, where Jim Barry faces Ralph Calloway, I'm pulling hard for the Caucasian. This is one spot where I think the white man is going to show his superiority, for he has height, weight, reach and experience in his favor. Calloway is a wicked hitter, and if he should land on the right spot it would mean curtains for the white lad. Barry is in great shape, and it will be some solace for the white race to know that all of the colored brothers are not as impervious to defeat as Johnson and Langford. The match presents enough element of doubt to make it one that will attract to the club house most of the members.

MIKE TWIN SULLIVAN COMES TO bat with a reply to Joe Woodman's rather reckless defi, printed in this column a few days ago. Mike admits that Sam Langford is a tough proposition, but says that he needn't go out of Boston to get a match if he can make weight. Here's Mike's letter:

Straight Dope, Boston American:

It made me laugh the other night when I read the statement made by Joe Woodman, manager of Langford, to the effect that he would beat me, my brothers Jack and Dan, with brother Dave refereeing, inside of fifteen rounds. This is the most ridiculous thing I ever heard of. Why, I could beat Langford myself, and will sign with him if he can make 154 pounds ringside, and then he wouldn't have to hook up with the rest of the family.

As soon as Jack gets through with the bouts that he has practically arranged with Bill Papke, for the Armory in a week or two, and a mill with Jim Flynn, the fireman, he will take on Langford, providing the latter will agree to make 160 ringside. I admit Langford is a tough proposition, but it is only a few years ago that he side-stepped a match with me at Chelsea.

I am now working harder than ever for my coming go with Jimmy Gardner at New Haven, November 29. I will probably leave for that city Friday night and work there until the date of the bout. I boxed six rounds with Billy Meehan, the clever boxer of "The Three Twin's" company, yesterday afternoon.

MIKE TWIN SULLIVAN.

HERE'S ONE WHICH SWEENEY declares is a canard (whatever that may be). Late in the season when Pittsburg was playing in Boston he was slipping closer and closer toward the plate while Wagner was batting, under the belief that the great shortstop was going to bunt toward third. Camnitz, who was on the coaching lines for Pittsburg, called to him:

"Here, watch what you're doing. You'll get your head knocked off with a line hit if you creep up on that fellow."

Sweeney (so they say) gave Camnitz one withering glance, and replied:

"What do I need with a head? My arm is good."

SOME CLASS TO THE MAT ARTists that are now flocking hither from all Europe to get the scalp of one Mr. Frank Gotch, who happens to hold the heavyweight title, which he wrested from George Hackenschmidt in Chicago considerably over a year ago. Two of the foreign aspirants are billed to appear at the Columbia Theatre on Wednesday night, and I will be on hand to see what the foreign grapplers look like. Tangal, who claims to be the Turkish champion, is one of the best of the bunch and showed his skill in this city last week when he put Ebberly, his opponent, out of the running. Wednesday night he will be opposed by Raoul De Rouin, the French heavyweight champion, who has developed into one of the best catch-as-catch-can wrestlers in the world.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Dear Sir: I would like to have you settle a bet. A bets that Tommy Burns was knocked out by Jack Johnson, and B claims that the police stopped the fight in the fourteenth round, and Burns said he had lots of fight in him and B claims he was not knocked out. Would like to see this in your Straight Dope. A constant reader of your paper. W. S. M.

Fort Fairfield, Me.

A wins the bet, for Johnson's victory over Tommy Burns counts as a knockout. B is right in his contention that the police stopped the bout. They ordered the referee to stop it in the fourteenth round to prevent it becoming a brutal slaughter, and under the rules the referee was bound to award the fight to the negro on a knockout. If you had the knockout end of the bet, W. S., you can show this to George Solomon and he'll settle.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Hoping to see this in the Straight Dope, I write to tell you that I have under my wing Young O'Rourke of Cambridge and want to match him with Dave Barry, the fighting messenger or Big Chief, the other messenger, or Young Sousa of Cambridge. He will fight the best of them and anything that comes his way. Yours truly, J. F. HARVEY.

645 Cambridge street, Cambridge.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Will you kindly insert the following in the "Straight Dope" in the American:

Last week I read in your valuable column a piece about the Pontiac football team of Roxbury, which claims the 115-pound championship of the State.

It seems to me that the Pontiacs have a "yellow streak," for the Iroquois team of Roxbury has challenged them time and time again to no avail.

The Iroquois team has been in the field all the season and has defeated most of the best elevens of the same weight.

The football fans of Roxbury say that the sturdy Iroquois team is the classiest aggregation of football players for 115 pounds that ever represented Roxbury. A FAN.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

In the edition of the AMERICAN which appeared about four o'clock Saturday afternoon, in the article about the cross-country run, the statement was made that "P. Withington of Harvard finished fourth, also that he was to play football against Yale in the afternoon. I wish you would let me know through your column in the AMERICAN if that is right. I have made a bet on it, for I had reason to doubt after seeing it printed. Please reply as soon as possible. Yours, JACK D. EARLE.

No. 65 Kilby street, Boston.

You read it correctly, but the only thing wrong about it is that it was another P. Withington, and he did not play in the football game in the afternoon.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

If you will kindly insert the following before Friday you will oblige one who sometimes differs, but on the whole enjoys Straight Dope:

When the Stetson A. C. five and their bitter rivals for the 110-lb. championship of Charlestown, the Knights of Bunker Hill, meet next Friday night the fur is sure to fly. Both teams have been claiming supremacy since their bitterly contested game of last year, which resulted in a victory for the Knights by the close score of 11 to 10. Since that event both teams have met and defeated the fastest teams in the city, such teams as the Franklins and Dwight A. C. yielding to their great superiority. This only makes the coming struggle a most important one for both fives, and the victors will be recognized as the undisputed champions of the district.

The game will be played at the Stetson's Gymnasium, at No. 79 Main street, Charlestown.

JOHN D. DRISCOLL.

No. 2 Stetson court, Charlestown.

P. S.—If you are over that way call in and see us. J. D. D.

THERE ARE LETTERS IN THIS office for Eddie Keevin, manager of Bantam Champion Jimmy Walsh, and for Johnny Mooney, manager of Eddie Shevlin.

RORTY MAKING A SUCCESS AS POLO REFEREE

H. J. Rorty of Hartford, who is making a hit refereeing the New England Polo League this season, stopped over in Boston from the Brockton game to visit friends here. He firmly believes in the great future of league polo.

This is the initial season that a league has worked on the percentage plan, the home team getting 60 per cent. of the gate to 40 for the visitors. This is of wonderful help in carrying along the weak cities. Besides, there is a sinking fund to protect the league at any time it may become necessary.

In every city in the league there has been a remarkable good attendance to date. At Brockton Saturday night over 1,500 paid at the gate, and in no match this year has less than 1,000 been counted. This is true of Waterbury, Ct., and several other cities.

Rorty was for three years umpire in the Connecticut baseball league. Last season he umpired in the New England League, and his success is related by Secretary Jake Morse saying that at the close managers, captains and players came to him to be sure and secure Rorty for next season.

MANTELL READY FOR ANY MIDDLEWEIGHT

Frank Mantell of Pawtucket is in the middleweight class, his weight being 158 pounds, and not 185, as the types have made his appear. Edward E. Moore, manager of Mantell, writes that his $100 forfeit to fight any middleweight in the business will remain in the hands of the Sporting Editor of the BOSTON AMERICAN for some time, and he will go as far as $500 for a side bet. Mantell is now on his way East from California.

NO FOOTLIGHT LAURELS FOR HANS WAGNER

Hans Wagner going on the stage? Not much!

Six months in the limelight is quite enough for the Carnegie German, and the Temples of Thespis will not see him this Winter, except as a spectator.

Some time ago it was announced that Wagner had accepted an offer to double up with his protege, Hans Miller, for a fifteen-minute stunt in vaudeville, the chief feature of which was to have been a handball match, for all of which the two Hansies were to receive $500 a week.

Didn't Pan Out.

As they say in the German comedies, "It listened well," but it didn't pan out, for the simple reason that Hans wouldn't listen to the proposition.

"It was I who made the suggestion to Wagner," remarked Manager Harris, the Pittsburg theatrical promoter, "and I am sure if anybody could have induced Wagner to go on the stage I could, for only a year ago I got him to go on the stump for my brother, who was running for office in Pittsburg. But Hans would have none of the game.

Prefers to Hunt.

"'I'm in the limelight more than I want to be six months in the year,' he told me, 'and I don't care for any more of it. I want to hunt, play with my pals and drive my automobile during the off-season. I want to get away from the general public, and I certainly couldn't do it with this theatrical stunt on.' And so the proposition was turned down with finality."

TY COBB PAYS $100 FINE

CLEVELAND, Nov. 23.—Ty Cobb, the star fielder of the Detroit American baseball team, was fined $100 and costs for assaulting George Stanfield, a night watchman in a hotel on the occasion of the Detroit team's last visit to Cleveland.

When the fine was announced by Judge Vickery, Cobb said he did not have that much money and the execution of judgment was continued to give the ball player an opportunity to obtain funds.

Cobb was indicted on the charge of cutting with intent to wound, following a fight with Stanfield in which the watchman was stabbed, but in criminal court to-day was allowed to plead guilty to assault and battery. This did away with the necessity of a trial.

The County Prosecutor's office agreed to the charge in the indictment, saying it could not convict on the original charge.

"If what the State says is true, it could not convict on any charge," said the Court. "It looks to me like the other man started the fight."

Cobb raised the $100 later and paid it.

ATLANTA SHOW BOOMED AUTO GAME IN SOUTH

By J. C. KERRISON.

V. A. Charles of the S. M. Supplies Company returned yesterday from the Atlanta Exposition, where he had been caring for the interests of the Inter State. Mr. Charles says that the Atlanta Exhibition proved one of the best he has ever seen. It did much to open up the South to the cause of motoring, and the interest exhibited was even greater than was anticipated. He is confident that the South will soon be considered as strong a motoring field as any of the land. This is shown by the establishment in Atlanta of quite a large number of agencies and branches.

The racing, he said, was the best that he has ever seen, the race course being exceptionally well constructed and well guarded. The racing and the show has placed Atlanta years ahead in the motor world, and all the manufacturers and dealers engaged therein will reap the benefits.

A Thermos bottle on wheels is the latest thing to attract the attention of Bostonians and others these days. This latest creation in motor vehicles arrived in town yesterday, coming here at the instance of the Iver Johnson Sporting Goods Company, local distributers of the bottle which has become so popular with those who tour.

This bottle, made of brightly shining aluminum mounted on a six cylinder chassis, is one of the most novel of advertising schemes and has since its construction covered something like 10,000 miles, it being first seen in the East at the races on the Vanderbilt cup course.

Nat Chayes and T. D. Williams are the men who control the destinies of the car, and they tell many interesting experiences.

The effect cost the company something like $14,000, but it is considered a good investment, for it never fails to attract attention. The car will remain in this section for about a week, making trips to all the favorite haunts of the motorists.

Three new clubs have been elected to membership in the American Automobile Association, they being Atlanta Automobile Association of Atlanta, Ga.; Waco Automobile Club, Waco, Tex., and the Rowan County Automobile Club of Salisbury, N. C. Active work is progressing toward the formation of State associations in Texas, North Carolina, Albama and Florida.

Secretary R. M. Reed of the Tampa Club states automobile interest is increasing rapidly in all parts of Florida, and the clubs that are likely to be affiliated with the State body will be the Tampa, Daytona, De Land, Orlando, Bartow, Brooksville, Ocala, Gainesville and Jacksonville clubs.

* * *

The big tour recently held to Atlanta, Ga., from New York in the interests of new automobile clubs in Georgia and North Carolina are clear object lessons in themselves of the growing popularity of the motor car and the desire to obtain better highways. An ambitious plan is now under consideration by the officials of many counties in Virginia, North and South Carolina and Georgia to make a continuous stretch of improved road 750 miles long. It is to be known as the Capitol Highway, because it will connect the State capitols of the four States, Richmond, Raleigh, Columbia and Atlanta.

President Lewis R. Speare of the A. A. A. has appointed Ralph W. Smith, president of the Denver Motor Club, also president of the Colorado State Automobile Association, as member of the A. A. A. executive committee. Secretary Frederick H. Elliott of the A. A. A. is to make arrangements for the customary reduced railroad rates for A. A. A. members desiring to attend some of the meetings to be held in New York City during the coming two big automobile shows, the Grand Central Palace show, from December 31 to January 7, and the Madison Square Garden show from January 8 to 15.

Huff, who owned him at his death.

Bagley, who recently died at Fitchburg, at the age of ninety-six years, left the residue of his estate, which amounts to about $75,000, to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, to be used in pursuing its humane work. Back of this bequest on the part of Mr. Bagley lies the sentiment and feeling fostered all these years by the aged man for Edith B., a mare that was the pride of his youth and that is said to have been a sister of the dam of the famous stallion Harold, the sire of Maud S.

J. E. Swendeman of Roxbury has sold to H. A. Brehm, Baltimore, the two-year-old stallion Earlewood, by Allewood, 2:09¼, out of Becky Thisbe, 2:29¾; reported price, $1,000.

* * *

Sanford Small of this city has made terms for standing his stallion Marechal, 3, 2:18¾, next year at North Randall, O. Then in 1911 Marechal will be returned to "Long Shot" Cox for another prep for traveling along the Big Line in his class. When right he can beat 2:10 a whole lot.

GOLF GOSSIP CLUB NOTES

Quite an interesting foursome was played at Brae Burn recently between Thomas M. Sherman, the Vice-President's son, a member of the Yahnundasis Club, and John Shepard, Jr., a former president of the Rhode Island Golf Association and a member of the Rhode Island team, against Brice S. Evans and J. W. Small of Brae Burn. The latter pair had things going pretty smoothly and managed to win by a good margin owing to Small's consistently good work and Evans's phenomenal playing on some of the holes.

Not much has been heard lately about Jerome D. Travers, the former national amateur champion, but he is still at the game, and his match play card of 76 in the last invitation tourney at the Montclair Club, N. J., where he went to an extra hole with John M. Ward, shows that he is still playing first rate golf.

Allston members are congratulating themselves on the fact that they are not to lose their links just at present. The recent special meeting found most of the members ready and willing to put their hands in their pockets for the additional money to hold the links that have been theirs since golf started in this State. Of course, Allston cannot expect to hold the valuable piece of property that they now lease for any number of years, but the fact that they are to have it a little longer is the cause of a great deal of satisfaction to the business men who avail themselves of the privileges at this club through the Summer months and get in a round or two of golf after work is over.

Dr. Tracey Engle, who at one time could be seen during the pleasant afternoons playing his favorite game over the Franklin Park links, is missing now among those who play at this season. His duties keep him from playing as much as he would like, but he advocates golf for young and old alike as the best tonic to keep one in first-rate condition.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

PIRATES ON A HUNT FOR NEW MAN AT FIRST

Who will cover first base for the championship Pirate team in 1910? This is a question that will not be answered until after Fred Clarke has had an opportunity to size up the situation at the training camp next Spring, and maybe not then, but it furnishes a live topic of speculation.

Although no official announcement of the fact has been made, it is almost a certainty that Bill Abstein will not be assigned to the job unless the other candidates for the berth fall far short of the claims that have been advanced for them.

Abstein did well enough during the regular playing season. Although at times he pulled some very crude stuff, Bill aided the Buccaneers to a number of victories by effective stickwork. He was practically a newcomer in the major league and the National pitchers did not know just what he particularly did not like.

Sucker on Curved Ball.

Southpaw heavers proved picking for Abstein and so did the speed ball merchants, but it developed later that the Pirate initial sack guardian was a "sucker" on a curve ball, and during the great world's series the Detroit slabmen served up plenty of benders, with the result that Bill proved a shining mark.

Then Hugh Jennings figured that Abstein was not overly game and the Tigers tossed threatening chatter, which worried "Abby" not a little until they apparently got his goat and had the St. Louis citizen up in the air. Bill sprung a couple of "bonehead" plays that jeopardized the Pirates' chances of beating the American League premiers and had the series been lost, Abstein would have drawn the major portion of blame.

It would seem that Abstein has too many faults to overcome before he classes in with a championship aggregation, and so we will look over the other first base material.

Pittsburg would like to put through a deal whereby a good, dependable first sacker would be secured, but it does not appear that desirable talent is on the market. Roger Bresnahan would want about nine good men for Konetchy and Cincinnati would not part with Hoblitzel. The only other classy initial corner custodians in the National are Kitty Bransfield of the Phillies, and Chance, of Chicago. Not a possibility.

Some followers of the Pirates contend that it would not be a bad scheme for Dreyfuss to secure Fred Tenney from the Giants. They believe the veteran is good for another season or two of active service and would prove helpful in developing a youngster for the position. This is not so wild, either.

Tenney is a great dispenser of pepper and it is a fact that he is well liked by both Dreyfuss and Clarke, who bid for him when he was put on the block by the Boston club.

IRISH WRESTLERS START FIGHTING

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Disqualification of both principals by Referee Tom Jenkins, followed by police interference when the grapplers desired to continue, brought to an end the Con O'Kelly and Pat Connolly wrestling match at the Grand Central Palace.

The match, which attracted many spectators, was a fight rather than wrestling. Both used fighting tactics and nearly all wrestling rules were violated. The men were repeatedly warned by the referee and, after his warnings went unheeded, he disqualified both. When they desired to resume a police captain stepped in and stopped the bout.

ZYBSCO THROWS WEBER.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 23.—Zybsco defeated Weber in a long-winded wrestling match, gaining the first fall in 55 minutes and the second in 22 minutes. The match was the best two out of three falls.

More AMERICANS are read in the homes in Boston than any other paper.

A. MUTT—AGAIN!

When the coat front begins to curl and break down, when the collar kicks away from the neck, when the lapels are indifferent—in fact—when that less-than-$20-suit or overcoat begins to show its real class or lack of class!—don't blame the poor tailor!—(even if he did lie all about the handwork he was going to put into the garment, but couldn't afford to.) BLAME YOURSELF—YOU are the original MR. A. MUTT! We've been beating away at the fact that the handwork which makes the "Newman collar" hug the neck costs money! It costs to make the coat front that does not curl—the lapels that lay perfectly, etc. Experience only will teach you that others find it difficult to duplicate the $20 Newman-made clothes even at $30!

Silly Women Who Boast of Conquests

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner.

A GREAT many silly American women go to Europe and bring discredit upon the New World by their conduct and conversation.

Probably the very silliest of all the silly crowd recently returned from abroad and entertained her friends and the reporters with her boastful accounts of her conquests.

According to the Queen of the Sillies, titled men played the role of college boys in a football "rush" while seeking her hand. They virtually "fell over one another" in pursuit of her.

One of the most renowned of her suitors wept wildly at her departure. All of them wrote her wonderful love letters; all of them were "purely disinterested" lovers; and while the Queen of the Sillies has a fortune, not one of her titled admirers gives the matter a thought, for to a man, they are rolling in wealth, and do not need her money. It is herself they seek; and with sweet womanly candor she tells how they love her, and how persistently they propose to her.

She uses names and titles with a frankness which must be particularly pleasing to any man of breeding.

It is difficult to imagine a woman possessed of the smallest amount of good, everyday common sense, combined with any pride and refinement, being led to make such utterances as the Queen of the Sillies made to reporters who interviewed her.

Such a Woman Is Vulgar

The woman who freely mentions her lovers and their infatuation for her to friends or strangers, for private or public discussion, is vulgar and coarse at heart, however she may hide under a veneer of polish which passes for culture.

If a man really love a woman he is entitled to her respectful silence when any obtrustive curiosity seeks to make his love a topic for discussion.

If a man is a fortune seeker and does not love the woman for herself, then he is not worth being made a subject of conversation. If the public sees that a woman is a belle, and that many men are seeking her, then there is no need for the woman to exploit her conquests.

A modest silence, a tactful evasion of the topic, and a respectful reference to her lovers as good friends, will always add to her womanly charms, and make her power and influence over men greater than ever.

Only one circumstance can excuse a woman for freely stating to the public a man's infatuation for her.

That is when some rejected lover has tried to villify her name, or cast a slur upon her reputation, through the revengeful spirit which one man in a score sometimes exhibits to a woman who has denied his suit. Then may a woman in all propriety use her privilege of self defence and prove that the man approached her as a suitor, before he pursued her as a foe.

Under any other circumstances, no refined, womanly hearted woman could possibly discuss the love she had inspired in her heart of a man, with a third person, unless that third person were her parent or closest friend.

Women Who Prate of Conquests

It is usually the very immature or the very passe woman who is guilty of this form of vulgar silliness.

Elderly women who have been beautiful and popular in their youth frequently fail to realize the passing of time and the vanishing of their charms, and when they possess fortune they accept the attentions of young men, in pursuit of luxury and ease as evidences of their circe-like powers over the opposite sex.

Recently such a woman was brought before a board of physicians by her children to have her mental state passed upon. The one topic of this woman's conversation was her popularity with men; their pursuit of her; their desire to marry her.

To all of these lovers the old lady proved herself a financial fairy, and in order to save her from bankruptcy her children brought her before the physicians, who did not hesitate to pronounce her mildly insane upon this one topic.

All women who make their love affairs topics of general discussion are to be classed with this unbalanced old dame.

No matter how young and beautiful they may be, yet if they fail to see the indelicacy, the lack of good taste, the absence of the finest qualities a woman can possess in lightly bandying about names of men who pay them court, then it is only kindness to think of them as mild lunatics.

LOVE'S MOVE ☘ ☘ ☘ ☘ By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

In the Summer the girl in the case sat dreamily on the bench while the man worshipped on the ground at her feet.

These nights the girl and the man in the case sit in the grateful glare of a blazing fire and toast marshmallows.

"THE melancholy days are come, the saddest of the year." And Love's on the move—out of the garden bench into the hearth-side settle—out of the hammock into the warm old Davenport.

For the last night that he sat out with two of his lovers in the fading garden among the yellow leaves his knees jiggled together and his teeth knocked and his nose turned cold like a puppy's, and to-night it snowed! The soft, silent, leisurely flakes of midwinter.

So Love sits no more in the garden. He gathered his chattels and his arrows and his bow and his smile, kissed his rosy fingers to the moon and the wind, both turned icy now, and climbed the piazza steps, out of dead Summer into the warm house of Winter.

No more will he dangle his legs off the limb of a fragrant apple tree, swaying in the airs of Summer and cocking a dreamy eye on the two in the patch work of sunshine and shade on the emerald grass.

No more will he balance in the moonlight, sniffing elder blossoms and curling his fist round his ear to hear if the whispering in the shadow below him goes on right.

What nights they were—but oo-ow! they sound cold now!

The girl in the case sat dreamily on the cool stone—her frock was so thin and frail it lifted and seemed to breathe with every faint wind—her head was bare and misty yellow in the moonshine.

The man in the case was in rolled-up shirt sleeves and canvas shoes.

But Love had to collect 'em and get them gone and planted in another spot.

Now he loafs the far side of the grate, drowsy with the heat, baking his little shins and shuddering at the thought of the cold stone bench out in the bare garden full of its rattling branches and dry leaves.

The girl in the case is in velvet, and the man has his coat on, and they sit in the grateful glare and murmur their old secrets while the marshmallows turn black and smoke loudly and violently.

"The melancholy days are come," and Love is on the move!

THE old man rubbed his nose meditatively. "My news is asleep in the next room. If it wasn't so late I'd bring him in. He's a little shrimp of a photographer, but—he's seen your murderer all right."

"The devil!" started M. Paul. "Where?"

Tignol drew back the double doors of a long window and pointed out to a balcony running along the front of the hotel.

Papa Tignol's Diagram

"There! Let me tell you first how this floor is arranged. There are six rooms opening on that balcony. See here," and taking a sheet of paper, he made a rough diagram, as follows:

"Now, then," continued Papa Tignol, surveying his handiwork with pride, "I think that is clear. We are in this room D, and my friend, the little photographer, is in the next room E, peacefully sleeping; but he wasn't peaceful when he came home tonight and heard me playing that flute, although I played in my best manner, eh, eh! He stood it for about ten minutes and then, eh, eh! It was another case of through the wall, first one boot, bang! then another boot, smash! only there were no holes for the boots to come through. And then it was profanity! For a small man he had a great deal of energy—eh, eh! that shrimp photographer! I called him a shrimp when he came bouncing in here."

"Well, well?" fretted Coquenil.

"Then we got acquainted. I apologized and offered him beer, which he likes; then he apologized and told me his troubles. Poor fellow, I don't wonder his nerves are unstrung! He's in love with a pretty dressmaker who lives in this room C. She is fair, but fickle. He tells me she has made him unhappy by flirting with a medical student who lives in this room G. Just a minute. I'm coming to the point.

"It seems the little photographer has been getting more and more jealous lately. He was satisfied that his lady love and the medical student used this balcony as a lovers' lane and he began lying in wait at his window for the medical student to steal past toward the dressmaker's room."

"Yes?" urged the detective with growing interest.

"For several nights last week he waited and nothing happened; but he's a patient little shrimp, so he waited again Saturday night and—something did happen. Saturday night!"

"The night of the murder," reflected the commissary.

"That's it. It was a little after midnight, he says, and suddenly, as he stood waiting and listening, he heard a cautious step coming along the balcony from the direction of the medical student's room, G. Then he saw a man pass his window, and he was sure it was the medical student. He stepped out softly and followed him as far as the window of room C, which is just this side of the dressmaker's room. Then, feeling sure his suspicions were justified, he sprang upon the man from behind, intending to chastise him, but he had caught the wrong pig by the ear, for the man turned on him like a flash and—it wasn't the medical student."

"Who was it? Go on," exclaimed the other eagerly.

"He doesn't know who it was or anything about the man except that his hand shut like a vise on the shrimp's throat and nearly choked the life out of him. You can see the nail marks still on his cheek and neck; but he remembered distinctly that the man carried something in his hand."

"My God! The missing pair of boots!" cried Coquenil. "Was it?"

Tignol nodded. "Sure. He was carrying 'em loose in his hand. I mean they were not wrapped up; he was going to leave 'em in Kittredge's room; here it is." He pointed to the diagram.

"It's true, it must be true," murmured M. Paul. "And what then?"

"Nothing. I guess the man saw it was only a shrimp he had hold of, so he shook him two or three times and dropped him back into his own room, and he never said a word."

"And the boots?"

"He must have taken the boots with him. The shrimp peeped out and saw him go back into this room, F, which has been empty for several weeks. Then he heard steps on the stairs and the slam of the heavy street door. The man was gone."

Coquenil's face grew sombre. "It was the assassin," he said; "there's no doubt about it."

"Mightn't it have been someone he sent?" suggested Pougeot.

"No, that would have meant trusting his secret to another man, and he hasn't trusted any one. Besides, the fierce way he turned on the photographer shows his nervous tension. It was the murderer himself, and"—— The detective stopped short at the flash of a new thought. "Great heavens!" he cried, "I can prove it—I can settle the thing right now. You say his nail marks show?"

Tignol shrugged his shoulders. "They show as little scratches, but not enough for any funny business with a microscope."

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

NOT NOW

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

During the Summer I met a young man who seemed to think a great deal of me. He was always in my company and when I left the country he promised to see me at home. This he did, and while here took me to many places of amusement. I know he did not take any other girl out. After he left Boston he wrote me but I did not answer his letters. He then sent a postal asking the reason for my silence. This I did not answer. He also gave me a present as a remembrance. What I want to know is do you think he loves me?

M. B. D.

HE certainly did care very much for you but I think he must be cured of his love by now. You have given him every reason to be discouraged. If you did not return his love you did the right thing in discouraging him, but if you did care I am afraid you made a mistake.

LET MAN DO COURTING

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl of nineteen, and have been keeping company with a young man two years older than myself. I met him about two months ago and he appeared to be very nice and asked me to correspond with him. I told him I would do so and finally asked him to come to my home. He came and met my mother and sister and also my friends. They all think a great deal of him. I have grown to like him very much and think of him all the time. I think that he thinks a great deal of me. Sometimes he would write nearly every night and then again he would not write for about a week. He comes down to see me once a week. Now, dear Miss Fairfax, please tell me what he means by doing so for I like him and would just as soon marry him to-day if he would ask me. Please tell me how I can find out whether he is serious or not.

EDITH B. B.
Haverhill.

YOU are old enought to be able to judge from his actions and manner and general demeanor whether or not he is serious. It is not unusual that a young man should not write every night in the week, and some girls are inclined to be a little too exacting in the attentions they demand. Be retiring, let things take their course and by all means, let the young man do ALL the courting.

Two Days

By ETHEL CLIFFORD

THE day I saw you first, beloved,
A bird upon a briar-rose
Kept measure with my singing heart.
And as the kingdom true love knows
I entered in and took my part.
He sang as sang the bird that waked
The morning first in Eden close.

The day you went away, beloved,
The chariot of the sun was late.
The air was full of rain and mist;
And all the hour you made me wait,
Before you kept the parting tryst,
The skies wept as the angel wept
Who held the sword at Eden gate.

What to Give Him at the Christmastide

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

IT seems rather early yet to talk of Christmas gifts, but to those who must save their pennies the time is all too short.

There is not one girl, among all my readers, but who is interested in some particular man—which is quite as it should be.

Just at present her little head is busy trying to solve the problem, "What to give him for Christmas?"

To the girl who is earning her own living, or has a small allowance, the price is of the utmost importance.

She wants her gift to be the very best and most precious of all his Christmas gifts.

If he loves you, little girl, it will be the most precious; don't fret about that. It is the sentiment of the gift, not the price, that makes it precious. You have several weeks in which to get your head and your hands busy.

Have you ever chochetted or knitted a silk necktie? In the good shops these ties are very expensive, but if you know how to knit you can make one for a trifling cost.

Be sure to choose a color that matches the young man's eyes; then the tie will be sure to look well on him.

Or you might knit one of the white Berlin wool scarfs that men are now wearing inside their overcoats when in evening dress. They are about a yard and a half long and a yard wide, and are intended to keep the dress shirt from being soiled by the overcoat.

A picture frame is always a useful gift; very pretty ones are made of cardboard, covered with brocaded silk or cretonne.

A fine linen handkerchief, with the initials embroidered in the corner, will not come amiss.

This Would Be Bad Taste

Remember that it is bad taste to give a man an expensive gift, as it places him under too much of an obligation. If he is fond of reading, the question of course is settled; he would rather have a book than aything.

For a dollar and a half you can get a plate and fifty engraved visiting cards. If he has not one already that would make a nice gift.

Most young men take some pride in making their rooms look pretty and attractive.

If your particular young man is interested in that sort of thing, there are endless things to give him. A gay cushion, a pretty picture, a table cover, a plant in a china flower pot, there are dozens of pretty or useful things to be thought of.

Don't give a man a present unless you know him well enough to know that he will appreciate it.

If you have known him only a few weeks it would be absurd to give him anything. He might send you a box of candy or flowers, but that would not necessitate your returning the courtesy. Men have privileges of that kind which girls have not.

Don't Have This Wrong Idea

The idea that a gift, in order to be valued, must cost a lot has destroyed most of the beautiful spirit of giving. It has come to the point where Christmas is dreaded more than looked forward to.

We all give a good many duty presents, on which very little love is spent.

Present-giving of that kind lingers on, from year to year, because neither side likes to be the first to stop.

Don't bother your pretty head over what to give that very dear and particular young man. Decide at once, and then set to work to make it, if you can, and if you have not the time and skill to do that, begin right away to save your pennies. And remember, it is because it is your gift that he will appreciate it, not for the money you spend on it.

YOU couldn't get better authority on food values than Dr. James Crichton Browne, LL.D., F.R.S. of London, England.

He says: "Eat good oatmeal, eat it often and plenty of it. It is the food that has built the brain and brawn of Scotland."

The experts of the Seattle Exposition, just as all experts do when deciding about Quaker Oats, gave it the highest award over all others for purity, flavor and cleanliness.

It's the most economical food.

A THRILLING MYSTERY
By CHARLES E. WALK

Copyright, 1909, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

All the wealth and fashion of Williamsburg are gathered one Tuesday evening in June at the Church of St. Stephen the Martyr for the wedding of Lecomte Gibbs and Dorothy Day. The bridegroom is a high official in the trust that controls the iron and steel industry of America, while the bride is the brightest gem in Williamsburg's social diadem.

The bridesmaids are just forming into line in the vestry and are around the bride, when they are thrust aside by a roughly dressed stranger, who steps up to the bride and, after whispering a few words to her thrusts some article into her hand and disappears.

Dorothy Day turns pale and stands horror-stricken for a moment, then, clutching the article thrust into her hand to her bosom, she turns and leaves the vestry. A glimpse of her bridal finery as she hastens from the church is the last seen of her.

Flint, a plain clothes man from police headquarters, is detailed on the case.

Miss Gervaise, in detail, describes for Flint the scene which took place when the strange man entered the vestry. One thing she recalls is that the article thrust into Miss Day's hand was a gold bracelet, without a clasp, as if it had once been a circlet hurriedly cut or broken to release something it bound. It was of dull Roman gold, an inch broad, and bore some sort of inscription.

As to the stranger, he was uncouth, rough and shabby. One detail that Edith recalled vividly was the fact that on the back of the man's right hand was a long, white scar. She was sure that she had seen the man somewhere before.

The Unbidden Guest.

WHEN Mr. Flint returned to headquarters the night sergeant, shifting an unlighted cigar from one side of his mouth to the other, elevated an eyebrow until it assumed the importance and force of an interrogation mark. Then, briefly, Flint recounted the result of his expedition. The night sergeant grinned.

"Pretty tough on Gibbs," was his comment. "Any hint of the other fellow in the background?"

Mr. Flint sighed and shook his head.

"The real solution hasn't occurred to 'em yet. I didn't tell 'em—what's the use? Gibbs is a pretty decent fellow, and I hate to see him thrown down this way; but if he wants to get married he will have to pick another bride; a younger—if not a richer man has beat it with his first choice."

The night sergeant laughed a wheezy laugh (for he was fat and asthmatic), and wanted to know if Miss Fay was a "good-looker."

To this phase of the problem Mr. Flint merely turned his back, not deigning an answer.

"Them money-bugs all are—to me," remarked the unbash sergeant. "Gimme a match."

Thus, for the time being, was the matter disposed of by the police.

CHAPTER III.

The Brass Reliquary.

THERE is such a thing, however, as even the police jumping at conclusions with a cocksureness destined later to bring forth "revised" and "modified" statements. In the present instance, to cite an example, Mr. Flint was wrong in concluding that the obvious explanation of Miss Day's vanishment had not occurred to the party he had so recently left; for it had, but in a light that made them shudder.

Sure knowledge of their intimate friend, a sense of loyalty and obligation imposed by their breeding, caused their faith in one of their number to remain secure, even if somewhat shaken. It is not the loyalty that never mistrusts that is most to be desired in our friends, but the belief in us which, though assailed by doubts and uncertainties, can yet remain steadfast, firm in the faith we have inspired.

The phase of the affair from which Miss Day's friends shrank may be found in the probability that the rest of the world would not be so reluctant to advance opinions, and expatiate upon them ad nauseam; one and all, therefore, they closed their eyes to the promised publicity, and turned away their ears from the voice of scandal. The incursion of the police into their well-ordered concerns was bad enough; that false impressions and unlicensed gossip were sure to follow was infinitely worse.

During the ride to the Gervaise home very little was said by either of the carriage occupants. The events of the night were, of course, foremost in the minds of both, though they contemplated the matter from different points of view.

Miss Day was a particular friend of Miss Gervaise, while Foster Cole and Lecomte Gibbs presented to the world that degree of intimacy characterized as "chummy." They belonged to the same inner circle of the same fashionable set; they frequented the same clubs, hunted together from time to time in Montana or on the Chesapeake, and side by side yearly whipped the same Canadian streams. The steel magnate was considerably older than Cole, but that made not the lest difference in their attachment; of the two, the younger man was perhaps the more sophisticated.

The ride was soon accomplished.

"I can talk no more to-night," Miss Gervaise announced from the doorway; "come around in the morning—early."

After the briefest of good nights, Cole directed the driver to hasten to the new residence of Lecomte Gibbs.

In all of Williamsburg, a city noted for the magnificence of its palaces, there was no handsomer mansion than the one the millionaire had fitted up for his bride. As the cab stopped at the curb Cole looked up with a little start; in the dim figure that detached itself from a tree shadow the young man recognized his friend.

"I didn't care to go inside until you came," said Gibbs, simply, by which Cole understood that he lacked the courage to do so.

And, indeed, there was something infinitely pathetic in the contrast between the reality of his entrance into this abode of elegance and what his rose-colored fancy must have painted it some hours earlier in the night. The great pile of masonry, of gleaming marble and plate glass, was at this hour and in the present circumstances the hollowest mockery of a home; and Foster Cole could not help seeing the droop to his friend's shoulders, nor his ears fail to catch the sigh with which he was ushered into the rich hall.

However, as they paused before entering, Cole tapped with the toe of one shoe some yellow chalk markings which appeared on the top step.

"What's this?" he asked curiously.

Gibbs glanced down indifferently at the spot indicated.

"Don't know. Some boys"— he vaguely muttered, plainly too preoccupied to heed, and passed on.

Cole, though, regarded the design as a bit too intricate, it was in too unlikely a spot to be attributed to any possible boyish prank. A circle enclosed the letters and figures "Kt c—32 c." suggesting strongly to the young man's mind a cabalistic symbol, and appearing thus:

But he puzzled over the matter only for a moment, for at once he followed Gibbs into the house.

Cole was perhaps as familiar with the house's interior as was the master thereof himself; he had been consulted at each stage of the building's progress; and now he went directly to a luxurious apartment called—in deference to the prevailing fad in such things—"the den."

How many cozy hours were to have been spent in this room, every detail of whose furnishings was a direct inspiration of love! And now, how all the bright-hued dreams had been shattered by the hideous nightmare that had usurped their place!

The two men sat for a long time silent, as only two sympathetic masculine natures can in the face of a great crisis affecting the welfare of either. Mr. Gibbs's attitude was one of utter dejection, while Cole scowled into vacancy.

By and by the young fellow began to betray some signs of doubt and uncertainty; he shot quick glances at his motionless companion, as if anxious to unburden his mind of some disturbing factor, and, furthermore, as if he were unable to hit upon the best means of doing so. After a while, however, he spoke.

"Lecomte, the road that detective chap will follow to clear up this mystery is pretty plain."

Gibbs started from his revery.

"You think he will find her?" came eagerly from him.

Cole stirred uneasily and cleared his throat.

"I hope so," said he, with a certain air of restraint. "I sincerely hope so. But that is not what I meant, exactly."

He hesitated.

"Lecomte, old chap, forgive me, but we had better thresh this thing out together; it's better to consider every aspect of the matter than to have people shocking you with some fool suggestion every time you turn around. People are such blamed idiots in a matter of this kind, you know."

"Out with it; what road do you think the detective will follow?"

"Well, he'll go to burrowing into Dorothy's past; and, Lecomte, just between us, don't you know—that's where we must look for an explanation."

Lecomte Gibbs's refined countenance was deeply lined with worry. Yet it was clear that something in his friend's halting speech — so utterly foreign to the young man's habitual ease of manner— and the unmistakable note of seriousness that lay behind it, excited an unwonted apprehension in his mind. He looked at Cole with a curious expression, which the latter was at a loss to fathom.

"'Her past!'" echoed Gibbs. "What do you mean? For heaven's sake, speak out! My sensibilities cannot be further shocked, anyway. What do you mean by 'her past'?"

"Why—er—this. I will put it in this way: Some cause exists for her having vanished so inexplicably; it is self-evident that the cause was extraordinarily powerful to drag a woman like Dorothy Day—without the least resistance on her part, either—from the very side of the man she is about to marry. Now, a cause so potent could not have originated to-night; it could not be the creature of an hour or a day. Moreover, such a compelling influence could not come into her life at any time entirely without the knowledge of her friends and relatives."

Gibbs pondered the force of this reasoning; it presented a quite simple demonstration in logic, and he could offer nothing to refute it.

"What a damnable state of affairs!" he presently burst forth, and then, more calmly: "And you, Foster, what do you think of this road? Do you"——

Cole's head was shaking such a vigorous negative that the other did not proceed.

"That's all tommyrot, old man; nobody knows better than I do that Dolly loves you. We all know it. If you want to bring Edith's wrath down upon your head, why, you just hint to her that Dorothy Day cares the snap of her fingers for any other man alive. Nonsense! Rot!"

Gibbs sighed and leaned back in his easy chair; it was plain that the reassurance of his friend's warmth was very welcome.

What Was the Motive?

"But what can it all mean?" he puzzled. "What else could impel the poor girl to flee from the very altar, without a word to her friends—without token or message for—for me?" He bowed his head.

"Don't know," replied Cole, cheerfully now, since he had so successfully unburdened his mind. "I daresay the explanation will be simple enough when it comes. Women are such queer combinations—all paradox, you know; frightened to death by a mouse, but cool as you please with a lion. Why, the same woman that could face death without a quiver would scurry for cover, like a terrified bird, if she thought her shirtwaist was unbuttoned in the back."

"What the deuce do you know about such things?" asked Gibbs, without interest.

Mr. Cole spread out his hands and lifted his brows. Perhaps the gesture meant "intuition"; he didn't interpret it. Said he:

"Now you can hold tight to this: After the mystery is cleared away you will find it hinging on some simple little thing that we, being mere men, would never dream of."

(To Be Continued Tomorrow.)

VALUABLE HOME RECIPE

Will Break Up Severest Cold in a Day and Cure any Curable Cough.

"Mix one-half ounce of Concentrated pine compound with two ounces of glycerine and a half-pint of good whiskey. Shake thoroughly each time and use in doses of a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful every four hours." This formula is given out by a noted medical authority. Local druggists say this mixture will work wonders. Concentrated pine compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Chicago, but it, as well as the other ingredients, can be had from any good druggist, or he will quickly get them. Any one can mix them. Be sure to get the genuine "Concentrated" pine, which is plainly labeled and comes only in half-ounce bottles, each inclosed in an air-tight case.

KEEPING IN TOUCH WITH HOME

Hello, Son—Are you Having a Good Time?

THANKSGIVING time is particularly sacred to all New Englanders. Then it is that family ties are welded more strongly than ever before.

The old folks are thrilled once more with joy and happiness when their children come back to the old home for Thanksgiving dinner.

At this time there is nothing like the TELEPHONE for getting the family together and in aiding in making all the arrangements incident to the homecoming.

Then, too, if any member of the family is unable to be present at the reunion, he may send his personality and cheering voice over the telephone wires to the gathering from and to any point within the scope of the great Bell Telephone System of the United States.

Clyde Fitch's Last Play, "The City," Seen at the Globe, Proves to Be a Most Powerful Melodrama

Clyde Fitch wrote many plays, good, indifferent and often bad. "The City" is said to be his last work. In many respects it is greater than anything he ever did. Ibsen or Sudermann might have written the second act of "The City," seen for the first time in Boston last night at the Globe Theatre. American playwrights have seldom risen to such heights of emotion. It is not a play constructed according to established dramatic rules. The first act is really a prologue; it is a wonderfully lifelike picture of a humdrum small town home where the placidity of existence is broken in upon by tragedy, in the sudden death of the head of the family. Yet the first act could be performed by itself effectively.

The second act discloses Fitch as he has seldom been seen, a great playwright driving before him human emotions, gripping the hearts of the audience with the clutch of a master and forcing actors and audience into such a rarified atmosphere that they breath with difficulty.

After the sustained climax of the second act the auditor is released from the strain and watches the author endeavoring to work out his theme logically and convincingly. It is in a way anti-climatical. It could not be anything else, but it has interest of its own, and George Rand's defence of the city in this act is one of the best speeches in the play.

This play requires an exceptionally capable company, and it has one. Tully Marshall, as the drug fiend, does character work which has never been surpassed in this city. Walter Hampden, acceptably remembered in Boston for his excellent performance in "The Servant in the House," is exceptionally strong as George Rand. A. H. Stuart, Eva Vincent, Lucille Watson, Mary Nash, George Howell, Edward Emery and Helen Holmes contribute materially to the success of the piece.

Majestic.

Miss Viola Allen began the last week of her engagement in "The White Sister" at the Majestic Theatre last night. During this final week there will be a special matinee on Thursday in addition to the regular matinee Wednesday and Saturday. In "The White Sister" Miss Allen has a part admirably adapted to her ripened talents which have placed her among our foremost emotional actresses. It is a trying role and one which calls for the most delicate interpretation and yet at no moment through the whole performance is Miss Allen found wanting.

The playing of "The White Sister" is of the sort that is all too seldom seen upon our stage, for in staging this production Liebler & Company have surrounded Miss Allen with a company including the best players to be found to-day. They are players who were educated in the school which taught that clarity of speech and intelligence of accentuation were a vital part of the players art and hence the playing of this drama is notable. Miss Allen is the daughter of an actor of worth by whom she was schooled in the traditions of the elder day, and Mr. O'Neill, Miss Gale and Mrs. Pitt are of that day, while Mr. Farnum and the younger players seem to have taken heed of their elders and keyed their playing to that note which wins instant approval.

Castle Square.

An abundance of wholesome comedy, well seasoned with the milder condiments, lends a delightful flavor to Charles Hoyt's comedy, "A Contented Woman," now playing at the Castle Square Theatre. The play deals with a phase of the much mooted issue of woman's suffrage, and the scenes centre about a municipal election in Denver, Col.

Benton Holme (John Craig), wealthy and with political ambitions, is the regular mayoralty candidate, and is opposed by Grace Holme, his wife, played by Mary Young, candidate of the suffragists, who have been given the franchise. The campaign is spirited, with action every minute and scores of amusing complications. The women win by a narrow margin. On the night of her election Mrs. Holme, finding the duties of the office will mean a severance of her home ties, wishes to resign in favor of her husband, the defeated candidate, but cannot. All ends happily when it is discovered that she is a minor and the votes cast for her are thrown out.

Keith's.

Albert Chevalier, star of the London music halls and as instructive as he is funny, is back in Boston this week. Two enthusiastic audiences gave this delightful character actor a royal welcome at Keith's yesterday. As an impersonator of English type Chevalier's equal never came to this city. Besides keeping the audiences in an uproar by his representations of "low life," he shows remarkable power as a serious actor. The pathetic sides of his acting were even more pronounced than his humor and both pleased. "I've Got 'Er 'At" and "Vot fur do 'ee lov Oi" were two of his funniest songs, the representation of the love sick yokel being deliciously human. "My Old Dutch," one of the Chevalier favorites, came in as an encore.

Other features of the bill won their share of applause. Gruber's circus, with Minni, the trained elephant, a horse and a pony, proved one of the most enjoyable animal acts ever offered at Keith's.

American Music Hall.

Mesmerism or hypnotism, is the headline attraction at the American Music Hall this week. It is practiced by Pauline, and his work is undoubtedly of sensational order. Pauline, who is himself a big man, yesterday did remarkable things with a sixteen-year-old boy weighing 106 pounds and a frail-looking young man. He mesmerized the boy, stretched him from chairback to chairback and then stood on his rigid body. Then, two other men perched on the sleeping human bridge, 513 pounds in all. The boy's body never quivered under the tremendous load and when he was brought back to his senses he seemed to be as well as ever.

Then Pauline took the man, and with a few quick passes made his left arm "cataleptic," he called it. Certainly the blood fled from the arm and it looked like withered, dead flesh. Pauline said the arm could be submitted to any surgical operation without pain to the sleeper. The hypnotist made the arm span two chairbacks and he stood on the frail bridge, which never yielded under the spell.

Grand Opera House.

"The Creole's Revenge" is the title of a forceful melodrama, the work of Walter Lawrence, which is holding the boards of the Grand Opera House this week. The piece is one of those plays which makes the man and women who watch its production feel that they have met just such experiences themselves as they rub elbows in the great hurrying throng of everyday existence. The best impulses of the audience go out in free sympathy towards the woman whose life of sorrow and of wrong is being portrayed before them, while the unravelling of the plot is bright with situations which, one moment arouse boisterous laughter and the next induces tears.

Colonial.

"The Fair Co-Ed" entered upon its third and last week at the Colonial Theatre last evening. A great audience applauded Miss Janis's clever imitations and inimitable dances, while the tuneful music of Gustav Luders pleased all.

Hollis.

"The Widow's Might," in which Lillian Russell is starring at the Hollis, has proved a splendid vehicle for this popular favorite, and continues to draw large houses.

Park.

"A Gentleman from Mississippi" is still holding the fort at the Park, and its popularity is great as ever. A big audience was on hand last night to greet Douglas Fairbanks and Thomas A. Wise, and the outwitting of the grafting Senators by the innocent old soul from Mississippi never fails to delight.

Tremont.

Although "The Love Cure" entered upon its last week at the Tremont its popularity has not diminished, and the addition of a new principal to the cast last night caused much interest. Miss Florence Reid, who was so successful in the "Gay Hussars," comes into the cast, taking the part of Mildred. Miss Reid made one great big hit with her singing and in her comedy scenes with Harry Hyde.

Boston Theatre.

"The Three Twins" entered upon the last week of its engagement at the Boston last night and the tempest of laughter was undiminished from the rising of the curtain till the going down of the same. Bessie McCoy, Clifton Crawford, Daisy Leonard and others in the large cast received uproarious approval, while the "Yama Yama" song continues with never waning popularity.

Bowdoin Square.

A play that has lost none of its old-time popularity, "Kit, the Arkansas Traveler," was given a big reception yesterday at the Bowdoin Square Theatre. Frederick Van Rensselaer, James Barrett, Edytha Ketchum, Tommy Shearer, Harry Brooks and other favorites of the company won new laurels by their clever acting.

Howard Athenaeum.

Seldom has a show been better received than the "Jardin de Paris Girls" at the Howard. Belle Wilton, Rosalind May and Helen Lawton played with a vim that made the show snappy from start to finish. James Lichtor proved a capital comedian and dispensed packages of laughter, and the Dancing Mitchells, Musical Stewarts and others were conspicuous. Louis Christie was good in his particular part, and a house bill of excellence, which formed the continuous part of the bill, was in keeping with the progressive policy of that bohemian house. On Thanksgiving Day the show will begin at 12 o'clock.

Columbia.

Dave Marion and his "Dreamland" are the attraction at the Columbia this week, and the antics of the comedians and the singing and dancing of the pretty girls amused a large audience last night. There are a number of fine olio acts with this show and the final burlesque "Divorceland" is a hummer.

Austin & Stone's.

A show with a dozen big features drew large crowds to Austin & Stone's yesterday. The chief attraction was Gilpatrick, a man whose body has become ossified, and while he cannot walk or sit up or feel he can eat and talk interestingly and seems to enjoy life as much as any one.

Gaiety.

Harry Hasting's show at the Gaiety this week presents a bill of good quality. The musical numbers are the best of the show, and the comedy work is fair, although little new is apparent in the line of jokes. The chorus is lively and well drilled and the costumes are handsome. The principal comedy work is by Tom Coyne as an Irishman and H. Harvey as a Dutchman. The first burlesque is entitled "Americans in London" and the second "A Paris Model." Both have as much plot as usual. In the olio the illustrated songs of Bohannon and Corey are good. Harvey and Curtis pass the time with a little nonsense and dancing. Waterbury brothers and Tenny were seen for the first time at the Gaiety.

Hub.

Manager Joseph Mack of the Hub Theatre has succeeded in engaging the strong attraction of Torelli's Dog and Pony Circus for one week. The exhibition consists of educated ponies, dogs and a comedy mule. The other features appearing for the first half of the week are the Black Bass Comedy Four and Kitty Bingham, a clever character comedienne. Following the usual custom, there is an entire change in the vaudeville, pictures, songs and singers on Thursday.

Scenic Temple.

A splendid holiday bill crowded the Scenic Temple at both performances yesterday. The audiences were very demonstrative and almost every number was obliged to respond to recalls. The motion pictures were up-to-date and apropos to the holiday season.

Theatre Comique.

The latest novelty to be offered in the motion picture world is the "Talking Pictures," which were given for the first time yesterday at the popular Theatre Comique, and proved a great attraction at that house. Unlike the mechanical arrangements that have been previously exploited, this new feature is given by a stock company of clever players, who work out every scene with the accompanying dialogue. One of the best series of pictures shown portrays the tricks and tribulations heaped upon one Jones, entitled "Jones Loses His Trousers."

Pastime.

The Pastime Theatre presented yesterday a long list of novelties. The leading feature was a brand new moving picture, entitled "On the Border," and there were a number of interesting vaudeville acts.

Second Reception Given To-day for Lucy Cabot

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Debutantes with their happy affairs are still the centre of social interest, and never a day passes but some two or three events in their honor take place.

Among events of interest, aside from the reception which Mr. Arthur Amory and Miss Amory gave yesterday afternoon at their residence on Marlboro street for Miss Margery Prescott and Miss Katherine L. Amory, are the second Mrs. George Sewall Cabot, which she gave at her Sewall Cabot, which she is giving at her Marlboro street home this afternoon; Mrs. John Storer's tea, which she will give for her daughter, Miss Edith Storer, at her Beacon street home, the 29th, and Miss Swan's tea, which her father, Dr. William D. Swan, and her grandmother, Mrs. Swan, are giving for her on the 30th, at their Brattle street home, in Cambridge.

⁂

Quite the gayest of all the affairs of the week, however, is the debutante dance which Mrs. S. Parker Bremer is giving at her home, No. 33 Marlboro street, to-night, for Miss Elizabeth Ayer and Miss Ruth Anthony. About ninety guests will be present, including debutantes and Harvard boys.

The decorations are pink and an orchestra furnishes the music. A supper is served. Mrs. Bremer and Miss Ayer wear white, while Miss Anthony wears pale blue.

The affair is preceded by a dinner at the home of Mrs. S. Reed Anthony, who later takes the guests on to the dance.

⁂

The initial of the season's performances of the Paint and Powder Club of Brookline is given at Whitney Hall this evening, and judging by the past successes of the club the long preparation and fine cast this performance will be far more successful than any of the preceding ones.

"The School Mistress" is the name of the play to be produced. Included in the cast are Lowell D. McNutt, Miss Margaret Conrad, Miss Bertha Converse, Mrs. Conrad Gerlach and D. S. Adler.

⁂

Among the patronesses for the Middlesex Hunt Club ball, which is to be given on Friday evening at the Town Hall in Lincoln, are Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, Mrs. Henry Lee Higginson, Mrs. Howard L. Snelling and Mrs. Grafton Safford. The ball will be attended by a large number of the smart set who have homes in the country surrounding Lincoln and who have decided to remain at their country homes until after Thanksgiving festivities. The number of week-end house parties now being arranged for is larger than usual, owing to the continued mild weather.

⁂

Boston friends of the Whitins of Worcester and Whitinsville, are interested in the marriage of Miss Marjorie Swift Whitin, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry T. Whitin, to Philip Curtis of Worcester, which takes place to-morrow at 1 o'clock in the Rockdale Congregational Church. A wedding breakfast will be given at the home of the bride's parents at Bayside after the ceremony.

Mrs. George Marston Whitin of Whitinsville, who is an aunt of the bride, will give a dinner for the bridal party to-night at the Manor. The dinner will be followed by a large dancing party in one of the halls of the estate.

⁂

One of the most interesting events on the social calendar yesterday was the song recital which was given at the home of Mrs. Lucius Manlius Sargent of Dartmouth street by Miss Virginia Wainwright, one of the season's debutantes. Miss Wainwright was assisted by Miss Edith Jewell with the violin and Miss Annie Endicott Nourse at the piano.

⁂

Mrs. Hall McAllister has cards out announcing a series of her fashionable musicals which are to be given on Monday morning at 11:15 at the Somerset. The first one will be given on December 13, and as Mrs. McAllister's affairs are always popular the series will doubtless be well attended. Some of the artists she has already engaged are Mme. Margarita D'Alvarez, Mme. Marguerite Sylvia, Mlle. Yolando Mero, Frederica de Carasa, and Mischa Elmann.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Frothingham are in Boston for a few days and are visiting some of their relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams of this city were among the throng of visitors at Hot Springs seen yesterday on the boulevard with the various driving parties. Riding parties and bathing parties are chief among the diversions at this popular resort this Autumn.

⁂

Two hundred persons, who had got tickets, attended the opening of Mrs. John L. Gardner's Fenway Court. There have been two notable additions to the art collection, a painting of Pope Innocent X., by Velasquez, and a strong painting of a woman by Monet.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Robeson Sargent (Maria de Acosta), who were married at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Richard de Acosta, in New York about two weeks ago, have come to Brookline and are the guests of Mr. Sargent's parents, Professor and Mrs. Charles S. Sargent, at Holm Lea.

⁂

Sir Wilfred Thomason Grenfell and Mrs. Grenfell, who were married a few days ago in Chicago, have gone to Hot Springs in Virginia for the greater part of their honeymoon.

⁂

Announcement has come from Worcester of the engagement of Miss Marguerite Elizabeth Thay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Thayer, to Dr. William C. Quinby of Dartmouth street, Boston, who is the son of Dr. Henry Quinby of Worcester.

⁂

Another debutante affair to-day, which will be well attended by the members of the younger set, and particularly by the girls who are making their debut here this season, is the reception and tea which Miss Nelson of No. 272 Marlboro street is giving this afternoon in honor of her cousin, Miss Anne Nelson. Miss Nelson and her cousin make their home together since the death of the debutante's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Nelson. The young girl is a niece of Joseph H. Bigelow, who is also her guardian. Miss Adeline A. Bigelow of Fairfield street is arranging to give several dinners in her niece's honor. Miss Nelson has taken the house on Marlboro street for the Winter, and will entertain extensively for her niece this season. Twelve of the debutante's most intimate friends are assisting her this afternoon and are pouring at the tea and chocolate tables for her.

HOLDING CO. ABROAD FOR OIL TRUST?

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Like a wise general who anticipates defeat and has plans made for safe retreat, the Standard Oil attorneys have been working for months on a plan of reorganization. The work began as soon as the Oil Trust counsel had the slightest idea that the government might win its suit. If the trust's appeal is refused by the United States Supreme Court the company is ready without delay to form a new corporation to be the greatest, richest, most powerful and best organized in the world.

What the Standard Oil interests have planned, it is said, is a gigantic corporation to buy outright the physical property of the subsidiary companies. This one corporation, if formed, would have a capitalization of near $350,000,000.

Another plan contemplated is to put the different oil corporations under the control of foreign holding companies. The meeting of the heads of several of the minor corporations at Pittsburg, according to dispatches received to-day, is understood to have been marked by a consideration of this plan and the passing of secret orders from No. 26 Broadway.

For a long time the trust has had subsidiary organizations in foreign capitals, notably in London and Paris, which could at a moment's notice take up the gigantic system of the United States.

John D. Archbold, testifying in the suit to dissolve the trust, gave figures showing that the total capitalization of all the companies owned and controlled by the Standard was $328,301,495. Of this amount nearly one-third, or $98,338,300, was controlled by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

Lawyers are preparing the notice of appeal for argument in St. Louis. It is likely that advantage will be taken of the full thirty days allowed by the decision of the court.

The notice of appeal will act as a stay, and within a comparatively short time after the notice is filed the case will be laid before the Supreme Court.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

SHARP BREAK FOR COPPERS

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Copper shares were weak in the opening in Wall Street to-day, but almost immediately support was placed under them and a moderate advance was forced. Decision was reached late yesterday to proceed with the copper merger on the theory that it is not in restraint of trade or production, but simply a combination to conserve natural resources.

The general stock market was irregular. Reading and Consolidated Gas were the strong features. The Steel Shares were a trifle higher than the close of yesterday. The feature of the whole market was the absence of urgent liquidation, to judge by surface indications. Confidence seemed to be returning to the Street after the shock of Saturday and Monday.

Just at the end of the first hour in Wall street Amalgamated Copper broke four points and other stocks an average of two points. Selling was very heavy and the market became excited. This break was caused by fear that the copper merger would be abandoned because of the Standard Oil decision. Copper operators said they intended to go ahead with the merger.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

While the Standard Oil decision is unsettling it is not demoralizing.

$ $ $

Aside from some speculative liquidation, mostly "stop orders," there seems little selling pressure.

$ $ $

While the rallying process has not stayed miscellaneous selling, it has checked professional raiding.

$ $ $

Traders realize the meaning of Standard Oil party support, especially when they see the buying of what are known as Standard Oil issues.

$ $ $

It is not cynical to observe that the Standard Oil people have the fatal gift of retrospection; or, in homelier terms their hindsight is far superior to their foresight. They are more skilful in reparation than in preparation. They reconstruct far better than they construct. If half as much money and energy were expended in doing what should go done for the Standard Oil Company, doing what is right, as is spent in gathering up the debris made by court rulings and legislation, the organization would be on a safe basis.

$ $ $

When it was discovered that Reading stock was being taken by interests closely identified with the company, the stock was really wanted. Further investigation disclosed a belief that a melon is soon to be cut by the Reading directors.

$ $ $

These directors have been concealing the assets of Reading so long that they feel it is impossible to continue the farce without exposure. Both Reading and Consolidated Gas will undoubtedly give a fair statement of assets to stockholders in the near future. Just what shape the Reading melon will take cannot be stated at present, but it is a fact that persons who know all about the assets of the company are buying the stock anxiously and they welcome any break for the opportunity it gives them of getting what they consider some cheap shares in this railroad.

$ $ $

Stockholders of the Ice Trust were pleased last week with the slight advance in the price of their security. They had hoped that the court might dismiss the criminal indictments against the company, but those hopes were shattered when the Supreme Court announced that no indictments would be dismissed.

$ $ $

The upward course of Pennsylvania was halted because of the selling of those who were afraid of the effect of the Standard oil decision, the feeling not being so good as it might be. Yet no great losses in this security are looked for, as its position is regarded as a fine one. Good buying is predicted lower down.

$ $ $

One of the wise men in the Street said not long ago that the bears would have the turkey for Thanksgiving, but that it would go to the bulls for Christmas. This observation was thrown off when the fright regarding money matters was at its height.

$ $ $

Thanksgiving is but two days off, but the bulls are not worrying. They think their good luck will stand by them. For more than a year now they have triumphed over the shorts around holiday time and they say this will be no exception. They are looking for their turkey.

H. W. POOR & CO. SUED FOR $250,000

Henry W. Poor & Co., bankers and brokers of this city, are to-day defending themselves in a suit to recover $250,000 brought against them before Supreme Court Justice Joseph Morchauser at White Plains, N. Y., by Howard Willetts, the millionaire horse show exhibitor and clubman. Willetts alleges that through "fraud and misrepresentation" on the part of an agent of the local banking firm he was induced to buy mortgage gold bonds in the Newton & Northwestern Railroad Company. Mr. Willetts, who has a $2,000,000 estate at White Plains, is represented in his suit by former Assistant District Attorney Rand of Manhattan. Willetts says that the prospectus of the railroad deceived him.

CUBAN STEAMER LOST IN HURRICANE

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Cable dispatches received in New York City from Havana set forth that the Cuban steamer Maria Herrera of the Herrera line is missing, and may have been lost in the hurricane that swept over the West Indies a fortnight ago. If the Maria Herrera has been wrecked hers may be the wreckage reported from San Domingo as lying between the islands of Catalonia and Saona, about seventy-five miles east of San Domingo.

CLUB CLERK GONE; ACCOUNTS SHORT

With the disappearance of a clerk who had been employed for some time at the Woodland Golf Club, Newton, the officers have instituted a careful examination of the books of the club and a shortage of several hundred dollars is said to have been uncovered. A warrant has been issued for L. Webb Vinton, twenty-five years old, charging the larceny of $100.

FIRE-SWEPT TOWN UNDER MARTIAL LAW

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 22.—Warrenton, Va., to-day is under martial law following the disastrous fire last night, the local military company guarding the debris. The town was saved from complete destruction only by the use of dynamite. The loss is estimated at $70,000, with but little insurance.

LOCAL STOCKS ARE ERRATIC

STATE STREET, Nov. 23.—Copper shares were very erratic this forenoon and weakness was the chief characteristic. A sharp drop of 4⅝ points in Amalgamated shares to 87⅞ rather dampened the ardor of the bullish enthusiasts, and raised the question whether further hitches had not been encountered in the copper combine. The decline in Amalgamated shares was the result of arbitrage offerings, while the price in New York went off to 87¼.

By a coincidence Amalgamated and Steel common shares sold together at 88 toward the noon hour. The former is paying $2 per year and the latter $4, but Amalgamated is selling mystery on. North Butte was particularly erratic and sales at times were a point apart. Opening at 65¼ it broke to 62¼ and subsequently recovered to 64½.

Lake Copper also had a 2-point break to 46. Greene-Cananea and Utah Consolidated both recorded point declines.

The entire market was unsettled, and apparently something unfavorable is expected regarding the proposed Cole-Ryan Guggenheim copper merger.

The metal situation shows improvement, and the domestic price is quoted at just under 14 cents. Copper warrants abroad took another drop at the opening.

Curb trading was colorless and the trend of prices was slightly downward. There were no features.

FALLING OFF IN TRADING IN REAL ESTATE

Trading in real estate fell off in volume to-day from the good record that has characterized the market for the past two weeks.

Lawrence A. Ford, administrator of the estate of Patrick Canny, has sold the estate at No. 14 Charter street, North End, to Guiseppe Parziale. This property comprises a brick building and 1,130 square feet of land and is assessed for a total of $10,700, of which $5,700 is on the land.

In the West End the four-story and basement brick house and 1,176 square feet of land at No. 21 Auburn street, between Chambers and Poplar streets, have been sold by Tobias Kolow to Etta Kaplan. This estate is taxed on a total valuation of $6,100, of which $2,400 is on the land.

Lucretia McM. Buck has purchased from Minard B. Steinauer et ux the frame house and 2,290 square feet of land at No. 91 Clarkson street, near Hamilton street, Dorchester. The property is assessed on a total of $3,000, of which $5,00 is on the land.

In the same suburb a new frame house, not yet fully taxed, and 3,655 square feet of land, the latter rated for $1,100, on Victoria street, near Pleasant street, have been sold by William Duff et ux. to Hannah Herrick.

Harry Greenwood has sold to Amos M. Leonard a lot of land at the corner of Blue Hill avenue and Collins street, Mattapan, containing 6,240 square feet and taxed for $1,200.

ELECTRIC EXHIBIT WILL END THURSDAY

The Electrical Show in the Mechanics' Building will close at 10:30 o'clock Thanksgiving night. So far about 125,000 people have enjoyed the exhibition, regarded as one of the best of its kind ever given in this country, and the attendance yesterday and to-day warrants the belief that these figures will be duplicated within the next three days.

An added attraction to the diversified program for the final days is the popular soprano, Miss Louise Arnold Kenyon of Providence, soloist at last year's automobile show. Her return to Boston was marked by a repetition of last year's ovations.

KIDNAPPED BOY AGAIN MISSING

Harry, the fourteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bekovitch, living on Wyman street, Lynn, has been missing several days and the mother has asked the police to assist in finding him. About four years ago the boy was kidnapped at Baltimore, but the man who took him was captured in a short time and received a sentence of five years in prison.

The mother now thinks that this man has come and got him out of revenge for what was done to him in Baltimore.

BOSTON BANKER SPENT LAST EIGHT YEARS IN MISERY

Carleton H. Hutchinson, a leading banker and broker of Boston, with offices at 8 Congress street, in that city, has recently come out with a very strong statement.

In the widespread discussion over Cooper's new theory and medicines which has spread over the country so rapidly, Mr. Hutchinson has taken the side of those who say that Cooper's theory is correct and his medicine all that he claims.

Mr. Hutchinson's emphatic statement is as follows: "Anyone afflicted with chronic ill health and a general run-down condition caused by stomach trouble, who does not try this man Cooper's medicine is very foolish. I say this after a most remarkable experience with the medicine.

"I heard of Cooper's success first when he was in Chicago, as I have a private wire to that city in connection with my business. Later, when he came East, I learned more of him and his theory that stomach trouble causes most ill health. I have had no faith in anything not prescribed by a physician for each particular case after diagnosis, but after eight years of constant suffering, during which time I spent over $1,500 with absolutely no relief, I felt that it would at least do no harm to try the medicine which I was hearing so much about.

"During these eight years I have been forced to go without solid food for five and six weeks at a time. I always had a sour stomach, was troubled with formation of gas, and led the usual miserable life of a dyspeptic. I was dull, tired, nervous and gloomy all the time, and was always constipated.

"I have taken Cooper's medicine a comparatively short time. For the past month I have not had the slightest sign of stomach trouble. I can eat anything with no bad effect whatsoever. I have a fine appetite, am gaining flesh very rapidly, am cheerful, full of energy, and my nervousness has disappeared. My bowels are in perfect condition for the first time in eight years.

"I don't hesitate to say that I would not take $50,000 and be back where I was. My relief and thankfulness is beyond description."

Cooper's New Discovery can be obtained at any drug store in the United States.

INJURIES TO CHILDREN
Stealing Rides and Jumping On and Off Cars
Seventy-three per cent. reduction in one month results from co-operation of Parents, Public Authorities, Newspapers and the Company.

The campaign which the Company undertook in its endeavor to educate the children of the cities and towns wherein the Company operates of the danger of stealing rides and jumping on and off cars has been productive of such results that the Company desires to acknowledge the hearty co-operation of the school and police authorities and the newspapers, as well as that of parents.

In one month the reports received by the Company of children stealing rides and jumping on and off cars have been decreased from 806 to 217 per week.

This must be gratifying to everyone, especially to parents, and the Company not only thanks all who have contributed to this result, but asks further and continued co-operation toward the end that the dangerous practices may be kept down to the minimum.

Two Centuries Come Into Collision

An Accident Which Proves That We Are Not All Progressing at Exactly the Same Rate

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

In a country town, the other day, an automobile swept suddenly around a corner, the chauffeur's "honk" having given due notice that he was coming.

Two delivery wagons and a pony cart heard the warning and got out of the way. The driver of a third vehicle strove to do as much, but, his equipment being a hundred years behind the times, he couldn't manage it.

His motive power, two great, dull, red oxen, yoked together with hickory bows, had only one speed ahead, and none on the reverse.

The forward speed wasn't fast enough. The automobile caught one of the team on the flank, twisted him about till the bow that bound his neck snapped in two and he was released.

For a few minutes he lay gasping on the pavement, wondering what it was all about; then a merciful policeman fired the shot that freed him from bondage forever.

We might make this editorial still more of a comparison between two centuries if we could truthfully say that an aeroplane came flying up at this critical moment to tow home the disabled automobile. It WAS disabled. Even a sixty-horsepower car cannot run over an ox without getting damaged.

But, unfortunately, no aeroplane was in sight, and as airships are not yet really commercially active, we shall merely write of the automobile and the ox cart.

A hundred years ago, in every village and town in the New England and Eastern States, ox teams were lined up by dozens at market places.

The oxen were slow, but they were reliable. Fulton had just finished his first successful steamboat, but steamboats could not ply to and from the rural districts, remote from rivers, and oxen could.

They were more trustworthy than horses, and did not cost so much. So every farmer's boy knew the difference between "gee" and "haw," and was accustomed to plodding beside his father's yoke to the village and back, feeling that he drove a really splendid equipage.

Had any of those farmers' boys met a sixty-horsepower automobile puffing up a hill they would have been astonished—even more astonished than was the city bred chauffeur who drove the car.

It is likely that he would have believed he had seen the devil, and would have run howling home to his parents to tell his incredible story.

Civilization has progressed marvellously since the days of ox teams—yet the progress has by no means been universal.

Mechanical progress, like all other progress, follows a few leaders—men who think and plan for succeeding generations.

Then other men, for their own comfort and convenience, take up the inventions of the leaders and adapt them to their own purposes.

But always there are the laggards who do not progress at all; tenaciously clinging to the old customs and the old pursuits, and lag along a hundred years behind the rest of mankind, still inert, and unblinkingly content.

Throughout the country districts of the New England States oxen are yet to be found here and there.

Strange it is that ox teams and automobiles exist in the same age—but no stranger than hundreds of other evidences that vast numbers of human beings stand still while the rest of the world goes on.

Medical science has found a way practically to eliminate consumption—the "white plague" that once was the scourge of the world.

Yet in every city you will find hundreds of rotten, reeking tenements, where the disease is incubated as fast as ever it was in the dirtiest medieval community.

Side by side stand the modern model tenement and the tumbledown shack that has gathered germs for two hundred years, and where the undertaker calls far more regularly than the tenement house inspector.

Of a piece with the ox-driving farmer is a city government which permits such a thing to exist.

Common sense, directed by able thinkers, has learned that permitting child labor is not only infamous, but ruinous to the future of the country.

Yet when an active and thoughtful United States Senator strove to exclude goods manufactured by child labor from interstate commerce, and thus largely put an end to this horror, he was told by his ox-driving Senatorial brothers that he was seeking to overthrow the Constitution of the United States!

No doubt in the future this newspaper will record the collision of some swift airship, as it alights from a long journey, with another pair of wooden-yoked, wide-horned oxen.

In all things is progress slow. But long after the last ox has chewed his last cud and been gathered to his ancestors there will survive still more antiquated examples of the slowness of the human mind to grasp progress in thought and kindness and unselfishness.

Sea Level Canal Cheapest in End

At last it is made plain that the plan for a lock canal at Panama is not only an unsatisfactory makeshift, but also a wasteful extravagance.

The estimates of Colonel Goethals contain convincing evidence that the lock plan should give way to a plan for a sea-level canal.

These estimates of the chief engineer at Panama confirm the figures tentatively suggested last February to the House Committee on Appropriations.

It is thus officially announced that the lock-canal—which was to have cost $139,705,200, according to the specifications adopted by Congress in 1906—is really going to cost $297,766,000—or more.

This is the mere cost of the construction work. Add the purchase price of the original French canal and the expense of sanitation and civil government, and we are told now by Colonel Goethals that the total outlay for the lock-canal, if finished as planned, will amount to $375,201,000!

The estimates made by the chief engineer last year were many millions more than the original estimate, but they fell short of the present figures by nearly a hundred million dollars.

Thus it seems likely that the present figures will grow in the future to still more alarming proportions.

Already the supposed cost of the sea-level plan—$267,021,000—has been left far behind.

And, although it may be that the sea-level canal would cost more than $267,021,000, experience has amply shown that the choice of the dangerous and inadequate lock plan on mere grounds of economy, was a prodigious blunder.

It is not too late to do what we should have done in the first place.

Let us have a canal that shall be safe, satisfactory and indestructible.

Build the canal at sea level and SAVE MONEY IN THE END,

Never Again

Doant be foolish, sed Ma, you know very well that you wud not be allowed to stand up thare & reed a essay. Go ahed & help Bobbie rite it, if you want to, Ma sed, but doant go to the skool house to reed it. I doant want you to think, Ma sed, that I am jellus of the teecher, beekaus I know that you are not so vary attraktiv to the fair sex, having a beerd & beeing too fat.

Bobbie, sed Pa, in order to preserve peace in the fambly, I will content myself with meerly riteing this essay & you can go to the skool & reed it yureself. Now taik yure pencil & rite what I tell you:

Wat a wunderful geenyus was Walter Scott. He is dead & gone now, but posterity will evver reveer him, if for nothing else for these wundrus lines:

The sun that breef December day
Rose cheerless over hills of gray.

Doant rite that, Bobbie, sed Ma, beekaus that is not from one of Mister Scott's poems, that was rote by Mister Whittier. That is from a poem called Snowbound.

I thought I was helping littel Bobbie to rite this essay, sed Pa. Go ahed & rite: What shall we say of the matchless intelleck wich created them lines:

What, darest thou then
To beerd the lion in his den,
McDougal in his hall?
& if you say I am not peer
Cum into the garding, Maude,
& strike for yure altars & yure fires..

Well, said Pa to Ma, what are you giggling about? I suppose you think you cud rite a better essay than I am telling little Bobbie to rite. I want to be a good fellow, Pa sed, but you can take it from me that I will not stand for many moar of these interrupshuns. Go ahed & rite, Bobbie, sed Pa.

& so, thru the ages, the mitey mind of Sir Walter Scott has kep the publick spellbound by the match-less oratory of which he is so grate a master of poetry & prose. His Hiawatha alone, Pa sed, wud entitel him to deth-less fame. For instens:

To be, or not to be, sed Hiawatha,
Wether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
The slings & arrows of Minnehaha
Or to taik arms aggenst a sea of trubbel
& kill a red deer, Hiawatha sed.

Pa toald me a lot moar to rite, but after a while he got sleepy & went to bed, & then Ma helped me rite a reel essay about Mister Scott. Ma dosent talk as much as Pa, but she knows moar.

Pa thinks I am going to reed the essay wich he toald me to rite, but I threw it in the stoave.

❧ An Up-to-Date Seance ❧

By PERCY SHAW

A SWEET silence fell on the darkened room. One by one, silently, the audience settled in its seats. There were Sugar Trust officials, with acidulous eyes, lawyers scenting more money, weighers who had been found wanting, inspectors bearing signs which read, "Please pity the blind," and other customs factotums who had been remiss in their duties.

All had gathered by design to invoke aid through the medium of Mlle. Malladrino from the spirits who watch over the Sugar Trust.

Majestic, inspiring, she rolled on the stage, wearing a hoop skirt and disguised as a sugar barrel to facilitate communication with the rich departed. In one hand she held a scale and with the other waved a corset steel, all the while whirling round and round and chanting several staves of a mystic song:

Parr, Parr, where is Parr?
Gone to the White House, Ha! Ha! Ha!

This incantation had a weird effect on the listeners. They moved uneasily in their seats, and with startled eyes glanced toward the door. Faster and faster whirled the woman of mystery; she cried, she groaned, she screamed. "I see—I see—strange sights—a Cannon aimed at two Parsons—loaded—am I right?—yes—yes—with block sugar. I see—I see—a Fowler with a gun on his shoulder glaring and shaking his fist at a smug-faced picture—my eyes grow dim—now I read under the picture the inscription, 'Portrait of Reynolds by himself.' I see—I see—oh, strange sights—a mare with a man's head eating twenty-five new thousand dollar bills—I see—I see—an uncouth figure, many sided, slippery, with a large mouth and a loud voice, labelled 'My Policies,' shaking its head and weeping, 'These be Parrlous times.'"

Mlle. Malladrino stopped short, and, flashing a baleful look on the company, asked in a piercing voice:

"Who caught you, when you, calling yourselves men, usurped the realm of women and used a corset spring to defraud your country?"

In a hollow groan from the audience came one word: "Parr."

"The spirits tell me——" her voice, which had hitherto shown traces of crude sweetness, now fell to a refined pitch—"the spirits tell me to tell you to tell all you know to Parr."

Amid falling grains of sugar Mlle. Malladrino rolled off the stage.
